HAY DEALERS SHOW ACTIVITY

PORTLAND MARKETS RECEIVE LOCAL HAY.

With Prices Firm and Offerings Consistent, Sale Season Is on.

Hay shipments from Eastern Oregon are now in full blast. Haines, in Baker county, is rated as one of the really big hay-producing districts and from there 100,000 tons are being shipped to Portland this week. Portions, however, are going elsewhere, but Portland is taking the bulk. With this starter Wallowa, Union and other Eastern Oregon hay producers are commencing the systematic sale of hay that goes on during the winter months and all of these districts have plenty of hay to sell, though heavy rains at the wrong period took the first class tone off much hay this summer.

In this county hay prices are remaining firm with considerable offerings. Local dealers, like the Haines shippers, are sending their stuff westward where the best markets are obtainable.
