BRANCH ASYLUM NEARLY FINISHED

Every preparation is being made for the occupation of the branch hospital. The high school building will be finished by the first of the new year, while all indications and opinions are that both of these buildings will be opened at a not late date, says the Pendleton East Oregonian. At the branch hospital, Olson & Johnson, the contractors, are now

Coal is being used as fuel now but later crude oil will be used. For the purpose of facilitating the handling of the oil, a gravitation pipe line has been laid to the railroad track where connection will be made with the oil cars.

Charles Murphy, state representative at the hospital and who will in all probability be retained as chief engineer, has had considerable leveling work done about the grounds, but has been forced to call a halt to this landscape architecture because of the exhaustion of the appropriation for that purpose. However, he has hopes more funds with which he can continue his work of beautification.

A description of the high grade of work done on the buildings would be impossible in these columns but it is safe to say that the state board has fulfilled its promise that the Eastern Oregon branch hospital will be the equal of any institution of its kind in the United States. A visit to and inspection of the buildings will prove the fact to the most skeptical.

Preparation is now being made for the removal of the county road past the hospital some fifty yards higher up the hill. The stakes for the new road have already been set.
