FOR SALE.
I have the following described lands and town lots which I want to sell: (a) 160 acres of Sandalwood land in cultivation, 40 acres in alfalfa and 40 acres in fall wheat. This can all be irrigated at slight expense, and is excellent alfalfa land. Will sell it either as a whole or in two 80 acre tracts; (b) 640 acres of bunch grass and stump land, 5 miles northwest of Summerville. This can be made an excellent summer pasture for a valley farmer; (c) 20 acre orchard at Alice, just beginning to bear, the best varieties of apples, best located for easy shipment of any orchard in the county; (d) House and block of land just across the street from the new high school building in Union, good buildings and well located and contains excellent family orchard; (e) House and two lots east of round house in La Grande, specially well located for employee of the railroad company; (f) Two lots at corner of Seventh and O, in the heart of the residence district, directly south of Dick Jones' new residence; (g) Two lots on Adams avenue, directly across the street from Bohankamp's store, the best located piece of business property in La Grande; (h) 160 acres at the head of Mill creek northwest of Summerville, excellent land, well watered. I have, also, several orchard tracts at Island City just beginning to bear all irrigated. My reason for selling is that I need the money, and any of the foregoing tracts will be sold either for cash or on such terms as will pay my debts, and as soon as this is accomplished the rest will be withdrawn from the market. SUICIDE AIM OF PRISONER

PENDELTON SUSPECT DRINKS LYE; ILL.

Screams Heard From Street After Dose is Taken.

Penleton, Nov. 26.—(Special)—The office of the county sheriff was thrown into a state of excitement about noon today when Steve La Barge alias Steve O'Baird, whose true name is said to be Hockiss seized a large can of lye, which one of the prisoners was using to clean up around the jail with, and drank down the contents. No sooner had the strong caustic alkali solution of potassium salts penetrated his throat than his screams were heard throughout the building and even on the streets. He fell to the floor writhing in agony and crying for assistance. The dose was so great that he began to wrench and vomit and a large portion of the poison was thrown out, but how much the doctor is unable to say. A hurry call was at once turned in to Dr. J. P. Bolden, who rushed to the jail and sought to relieve his suffering by all the ways known to medical science. He found the man badly burned about the mouth and throat and some tenderness in the esophagus and stomach, though sufficient time had not elapsed when he was called to note the full effects of the terrible poison. At 2 o'clock he was called the second time as the man was again suffering great agony and the physician sent some opiates to give temporary relief. Dr. Bolden says that he considers the man in a very precarious condition and holds out little hope for his recovery. The deputies in the sheriff's office are at a loss as to the reasons of the accused to attempt suicide and think that there must be some foundation to the rumor that he has been an inmate of a penitentiary somewhere else and the thought of again doing time caused him to attempt his life rather than face another term. Another theory is that he did not intend suicide but simply wanted to drink enough of the decoction to burn his mouth and throat, thinking that he would be transferred to the hospital and would have an opportunity to make his escape. Whichever idea he may have had, it is almost certain that he will soon have a chance to soon go before the Higher Judge for his sentence instead of trusting to the chance of a parole from Oswald.

A BIG BANK VAULT

How Its Doors Were Opened by a Message From the Sea.

THE MAGIC OF AN AEROGRAM.

A Dilemma From Which a Great Financial Institution Extricated Itself in Double Quick Time by a Rapid Exchange of Wireless Dispatches. To the ordinary layman, too busy or too indifferent to bother his head with scientific matters, wireless telegraphy is somewhat of a mystery. In a general way he knows that by its messages are flashed through the air over oceans and mountains, but he does not realize to what an extent and in what varied roles the aerial magic plays its parts in daily life. In "The Wireless Man" the author, Francis A. Collins, narrates an instance in which aerograms averted a possible financial mishap. He writes: "A secret, even a very big one, may be entrusted to the wireless man and funged halfway across the Atlantic with complete safety. There was the case, for instance, of the president of a great New York bank who sailed for Europe without leaving the combination of the locks of the vaults. As a rule, the combination is a single word; and the secret is known only to two or three. In this case, by an oversight, there was no one left ashore who knew the key. The money and securities of the bank were very safely locked away, and hours of work would be required to force the locks of the safe deposit vaults. "The bank president's steamer had sailed at 6 o'clock of a summer's morning to catch a favorable tide, and when the bank's officials tried to open the vaults at about 9 o'clock the steamer carrying the secret was upward of two hours at sea. A hasty examination showed that there was but one way to open the vaults, short of breaking into them, and that was by getting the code from the president, serenely unconscious of the troubles ashore. To delay opening the vaults would, of course, be a very serious matter. If the piles of money were not ready behind the barred windows promptly at 10, the fact would be known within a few minutes throughout the financial section. A serious run on a bank has been started for a less cause. "In the old days, before the cable, the secret could not have been gained in less than two or three weeks at best, or until a message had reached the president by mail and returned across the Atlantic. The cable alone would have cut the delay in two by catching the traveler on his arrival on the other side. Meanwhile the bank officials, hastily summoned to a conference, had acted quickly. The wireless stations had been notified, and a message explaining the situation was flashed from the top of a high building in New York and from the Sea Gate and Nantucket stations. All this was the work of less than ten minutes. "Now the combination word used to lock up these millions in gold, currency and securities is, of course, not a piece of information to be flashed broadcast along the Atlantic coast. It would be known to scores of people, even if the stations receiving guarded the secret with the utmost care. The officials therefore impressed upon the president the importance of sending his message in the private code used by the bank in its important cables. As the hour for opening the bank approached the officials waited with an impatience which may be imagined. "The wireless message was handed to the bank president as he sat at breakfast well out to sea. It was now exactly 9:15. There was a sudden vacancy at that particular table. After one glance at the aerogram the president, realizing the situation to the last detail, rushed madly for his stateroom to search for his code book. A few moments later a dignified elderly gentleman rushed into the wireless booth, demanding at any cost that his message be given the right of way. He got it. "An aerogram expressed in an unintelligible cipher was soon being flashed with the full power of the apparatus. The wireless stations along the coast had been ordered to expedite the message in every way and were waiting anxiously for it. It was read by two stations on the Long Island coast and repeated hurriedly to New York. A few minutes later the clerk at the telephone in the bank was carefully writing out the strange jumble of letters and translating them into intelligible English. The clock pointed to twenty minutes to 10, the bank's opening hour, when the great steel door swung noiselessly open on its hinges and the day was saved."

NO REASON FOR IT.

You Are Shown a Way Out.

There can be no reason why any reader of this who suffers the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the pains and dangers of kidney ills will fail to heed the word of a resident of this locality who has found relief. The following is convincing proof. Mrs. William McGregor, 711 Lillith St., Pendleton, Ore., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are by far the best kidney medicine I ever used. I was troubled from childhood by kidney complaint. My hands and feet swelled, in fact, my whole body bloated and I had a great deal of trouble from the kidney secretions. There was a dull pain in my back and sides and after stooping, I found it hard to straighten. Dizzy spells and headaches were common and my nerves were all unstrung. I rested poorly and on arising in the morning was tired and devoid of ambition. As time passed, my condition became worse and it would be hard to fully describe the misery I endured. I spent many dollars for doctors' treatment and I also tried remedies of every kind but to no avail until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills. This medicine made me well. I do not hesitate to tell of my experience and I trust that my statement will be the means of helping other kidney sufferers." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. AN EFFECTIVE TRIO.

The Stout Man, the Parson With a White Tie and the Corkscrew.

The smoking car was so dull that when the stout man produced a bottle his seat mates—three of them—smiled in joyous relief. "Who's gotta corkscrew?" he demanded. "None," said the man with the gray side whiskers. The stout man leaned across the aisle. "Beg pardon," he said, "but have you such a thing as a corkscrew about you?" The man with the white tie hesitated. For a moment he seemed pained. Then he fished a little, and reaching down into his pocket drew out the little article they wanted. Ten minutes later the stout man said he was going back to look for a friend. At the next station the white tie man gathered up his goods and chattels and left the car. Then came the conductor. "Did Fatty Frost and the parson show you any of their team work?" he laughingly asked. "Team work!" echoed the side whiskered man. "They're the cleverest swindling pair in the country," said the conductor, and passed on.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

RED TAPE AND A BATH.

Curious Experience of a Visitor in a Little French Town.

St. Lo, a little town in the Manche department in France, has no public bath house such as those found in most French towns and cities, for the private bath in France is yet, as it were, in its infancy. The youngsters of the town bathe in the Vire, but the 12,000 other inhabitants think themselves above such a thing as a bath. Visitors can get a bath, it is true, but they must order four liters of water, all that they are permitted, and it is taken to them. Not long ago a visitor in the town wished to take a bath. He went to the hospital to ask permission to take a bath there, as in Brittany this is the custom in towns where there is no public accommodation. The visitor's request was received rather coldly, and he was told that he would have to make his request in writing to the directors of the hospital. This he did and patiently awaited a response. None came, and the visitor left town. Two days later the response came and followed him from town to town throughout France, not catching up with him until he had returned to Paris. The response was as follows: "M. — is exceptionally authorized to take a bath at the hospital on condition that he is able to justify by a medical ordinance that this medication is necessary to his state of health."—Exchange.

A Gentle Rebuke.

Lady Dorothy Nevill in her reminiscences relates how Queen Victoria once rebuked a certain mistress of the robes for unpunctuality. A day and hour had been appointed for a public ceremony in which the queen was to take part. The hour had arrived, and of all the court the duchess alone was absent. The queen gave vent more than once to her impatience, and at last, just as she was about to enter her carriage without her first lady of honor, the duchess in breathless haste made her appearance, stammering out faint words of excuse. "My dear duchess," said the queen, smiling, "I think you must have a bad watch," and she unlocked from her neck the chain of a magnificent watch which she herself wore and passed it round the neck of the offender.

How Some Turks Tell Time.

Though comparatively few of the natives of Turkey own watches, yet they have an ingenious way of approximating the time, and some of them hit it with considerable accuracy. They locate two cardinal points of the compass and then, holding their hands together in such a manner that the forefingers point upward and in opposite directions, they observe the shadow cast. In the morning or evening at certain known hours one finger or the other will point directly at the sun. A comparison of the two shadows will determine the hours between.

A Case For Sympathy.

"I have three children who are the very image of myself," said Jones enthusiastically. "I pity the youngest," returned Brown quietly. "Why?" asked Jones. "Because he is the one who will have to resemble you the longest," said Brown.—London Tit-Bits.

Both Satisfied.

"I should like to break it off, but I can't bear to give up this diamond ring." "Then why don't you tell him so? He told me he'd be willing to lose the ring if he could get out of the engagement."

The Parting.

Aunt (to engaged niece)—So Henry went away yesterday, I hear. Parting is very painful, isn't it? Niece—I should say so. Every rib in my body is aching today.—Fliegende Blätter.
