CHURCHES TO BE MERGED

THREE ENTERPRISE DENOMINATIONS TO HAVE ONE PASTOR

Social, Intellectual and Spiritual Center in one Edifice.

(Enterprise Record Chieftain.)

Three of the four Protestant churches in Enterprise consolidated at a mass meeting of members held on Sunday at the Baptist church. The fourth church the Baptist, asked another week to consider the matter, as the meeting at which it was discussed was not attended by a sufficiently large proportion of the membership to warrant final action.

The united church is to be known in the formal phase as the Federated Church Bodies of Enterprise. For all purposes of public worship and in all social and other undertakings however, it will be more than a federation. It will be an actual consolidation.

One pastor will serve the union church. He will hold services in the house of worship best suited for the purpose. If the Baptists unite with the others, their church probably will be used for the Sunday services, as it is the newest, largest and most modern. The pastor will be selected with the view of utmost efficiency, and doctrinal differences will not be considered.

The new plan does not contemplate the withdrawal of the members from the several religious bodies with which they are now affiliated. In fact membership of individuals will be in these several churches rather than in the federation. New converts may elect with which of these churches they will affiliate, and the rites of that body will be observed, as to admission.

Management and control of the new organization shall be vested in a board of control consisting of three members from each of the constituent churches. There are three churches now in the federation and the board will consist of nine members if the Baptists do not join. If they do, the full board will have twelve members.

The activities of the united church church, it is expected, will cover a much wider field than has been possible with the separate congregations. Leaders in the movement, who are very enthusiastic over the success of the plan thus far, look to see the big church the center of social and intellectual life of the city, as well as the source of religious life. They plan concerts, entertainments of all sorts for old and young. It is not unlikely that the experiment may develop into a fully equipped institutional church.

The Sunday schools, of course, will also be merged. The plan now is to establish a graded school, one grade meeting in each of the present church buildings, all under one general superintendent who shall be assisted by sub-superintendents.

The churches which have voted unanimously to join the federation are the Presbyterian, Methodist and the Christian or Disciples. All four churches, as is the common experience in small cities, have found it a hard struggle to keep their organizations intact and to support a pastor, without energy or means enough left to attempt to enter new fields of useful endeavor. At present one of the churches has a pastor, Rev. J. B. Astwood of the Presbyterian body. Mr. Astwood is one of the heartiest supporters of the federation.

The move for church union had its start recently when leaders in three of the congregations now without pastors contemplated engaging new ministers. The Presbyterians, although having a pastor, shared in the common feeling that no one body was strong enough to maintain as efficient a church as they would like. A meeting was held last Wednesday night in the Methodist church to discuss informally the idea of union.

CHOOSING A HOBBY.

Make It One That Will Relieve the Tension of Business.

Writing on the advantage and enjoyment that a busy man will derive from a hobby, Arnold Bennett says in the Metropolitan:

"In choosing a distraction—that is to say, in choosing a rival to his business—he should select some pursuit whose nature differs as much as possible from the nature of his business, and which will bring into activity another side of his character. If his business is monotonous, demanding care and solitude rather than irregular, intense efforts of the brain, then let his distraction be such as will make a powerful call upon his brain. But if on the other hand the course of his business runs in crises that string up the brain to its tightest strain, then let his distraction be a foolish and merry one.

"Many men fall into the error of assuming that their hobbies must be as dignified and serious as their vocations, though surely the example of the greatest philosophers ought to have taught them better! They seem to imagine that they should continually be improving themselves in either body or mind. If they take up a sport, it is because the sport may improve their health. And if the hobby is intellectual it must needs be employed to improve their brain.

"The fact is that their conception of self improvement is too narrow. In their restricted sense of the phrase they possibly don't need improving, they possibly are already improved to the point of being a nuisance to their fellow creatures; possibly what they need is worsening. In the broad and full sense of the phrase self improvement, a course of self worsening might improve them.

"I have known men—and everybody has known them—who would approach nearer to perfection if they could only acquire a little carelessness, a little absentmindedness, a little thoughtlessness, a little irrational and infantile quality, a little unscrupulousness in the matter of the time of day. These considerations should be weighed before certain hobbies are dismissed as being unworthy of a path man's notice."

PICTURESQUE HAVANA.

A Foreign City in Every Sense, With Its Own Odd Charm.

Americans driving to their hotel through Havana's narrow, noisy streets invariably exclaim that it seems to them "as if they were abroad." The question to borrow a phrase from the widely traveled but unemotional Mr. Baedeker—"need not detain them long." They are abroad. Havana is not merely "like a foreign town"; it is a foreign town. It has its own odd look, its special picturesqueness, its own tumultuous life. It abounds in unknown dishes and strange fruits, and upon the hot tropic night it pours out half barbaric music and queer melancholy songs.

The long traditions of the Spanish dominion of the two Americas still cling about Havana's fortresses and the palaces, churches and monasteries of her ancient streets. She was a proud, rich city, the entrepot of the west, when our northern mainland was a wilderness. And now in the Cuban twentieth century she is a crowded, thriving, gay metropolis, with her own pride, her own tropic airs and graces, her own wholly un-American individuality.

She may be crowded in the brief winter season with American tourists, many contain (as indeed she always has contained) a considerable American business colony and may be a refuge for derelicts and vagabonds straggling from the pages of O. Henry, Richard Harding Davis, and other Kiplings of Spanish America. Still, she is always the old Havana, the Cuban capital of Cuba.—Harrison Rhodes in Metropolitan.

Sir Humphry Davy.

Sir Humphry Davy married a widow as peculiar as himself. His pet affection was a lack of time. He was always in a hurry. He pretended that he had no leisure to dress himself, and when a change of linen became necessary he simply put one shirt over another until he was known to have on five or six shirts at a time. Of course he could not wear this amount of apparel without appreciably increasing his size, and his friends not in the secret were sometimes surprised to see him fall off in apparent weight twenty pounds in a day. His wife's great anxiety was to keep him "fit for company," but as he did not care a fig for company she had no easy task, and domestic discord was a common thing.

The Light That Failed.

It was by an accident that Mr. Kipling got his famous title, "The Light That Failed." He had almost decided to call the novel "The Failure," although he was dissatisfied with this. One evening as he was sitting in his study reading by lamplight the light went suddenly down—almost failed. In fact, in a second Kipling jumped up, exclaiming excitedly, "By Jove, I've got it!" Pointing to the lamp, he said, "The Light That Failed."

A HARMLESS WAY TO DARKEN THE HAIR

A Little Sage and Sulphur Makes Gray Hair Vanish—A Remedy for All Hair Troubles.

Who does not know the value of Sage and Sulphur for keeping the hair dark, soft and glossy and in good condition? As a matter of fact, Sulphur is a natural element of hair and a deficiency of it in the hair is held by many scalp specialists to be connected with loss of color and vitality of the hair. Unquestionably, there is no better remedy for hair and scalp troubles, especially premature grayness, than Sage and Sulphur, if properly prepared.

The Wyeth Chemical company of New York put out an ideal preparation of this kind, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, in which Sage and Sulphur are combined with other valuable remedies for keeping the hair and scalp in clean, healthy condition.

If your hair is losing its color or constantly coming out, or if you are troubled with dandruff or dry, itchy scalp, get a fifty cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist, use it according to the simple directions, and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in the appearance of your hair.

All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented.
