He denounced Governor Forbes as an "extravagant official," asserting that the Benguet railroad was built through the mountains to the summer homes of the American colony at a cost of a million to the government, and an annual upkeep of $300,000.

OUR PRIMITIVE NEIGHBORS.

Both Baker and Pendleton lately have been pointing their index fingers at La Grande and calling attention to the large number of smallpox cases. This is the privilege of either of the sister towns, but we would like to call attention to the hypocrisy that prevails when a sister will yell smallpox in an adjoining community and at the same time try to conceal her own cases of such a disease. It very much resembles the old cry of "stop, thief", and will in the end react on the city that practices it.

La Grande has a reputation for playing all games in the open, including the business game. This city is not twisting the truth about smallpox—we have a few cases and we are handling those cases just as they should be handled. La Grande has reached a stage in her growth with her number of transient visitors when such diseases as smallpox are liable to appear—just as they are liable to appear in any city that is alive; any city that has ceased to be a village and really has a rush of people going and coming.

But best of all, La Grande does not sit on the doorstep and whine when a smallpox case appears. Proper treatment and isolation is given the cases and the wheels of business move right along. No person ever stayed away from Portland or Seattle or any other large city because there was smallpox in the city, neither are they staying away from La Grande and the visitor is just as safe here and as free from being inoculated with the villages of Baker or Pendleton and perhaps more so.

Without Being Robbed Man Goes Through Strange Performances.

Los Angeles, Jan. 28.—Unable to explain his disappearance from home in Newton, Pa., or his presence in California, Alexander Chambers, a wealthy mine owner, is in Los Angeles en route home. Chambers, according to his statement, remembers nothing since January 10th when he left Newton to visit a small town in Northern Pennsylvania, until he found himself in San Diego this date.

How he made the trip, his possible companions, or incidents of the last two weeks, are entirely beyond his recollection.

"I had a thousand dollars when I left Newton," he said, "and when I came to San Diego I found I hadn't been robbed."

Local physicians and police officers are non-plussed at the strange phenomenon and have started an investigation to learn the facts in the case if possible.

JUDGE FLAYS COURT SYSTEM

WHOLE SYSTEM MUST BE REMODELED.

Revolution Will Follow Unless Revision of Practice Comes.

Troy, Jan. 28.—That American administration of justice must be radically reformed if revolution is to be avoided, is the opinion of Supreme Justice Wesley Howard, expressed to the alumni of the La Salle Institute, He said:

"J. Foulk Brandt, an obscure valet, who was not guilty of the crime of which he was charged, was sentenced to 30 years while Joseph Robin, a millionaire wrecker of banks and homes goes to jail for a year. Moore
