er in color and only half of his germ cells will have the potentiality for making brown eyes. Hence, if he marries a blue or gray eyed wife, only half of his children will have brown eyes, and a light brown, too, because of two generations of dilution. In case Smith's wife also has brown eyes derived from one of her parents only, then three out of four of their children will have brown eyes, but only one of the three will get a double dose of brown; hence Smith's brown eyed children will not all transmit brown in the same degree. Thus it is possible for a brown eyed parent to have one-half or one-quarter of his children blue or gray eyed. But it is never possible for two blue or gray eyed parents to have brown eyed children.—Independent.

HEREDITY AND THE EYES.

Blue or Gray Eyed Parents Cannot Have Brown Eyed Children.

Since blue and probably gray eyed parents have no brown pigment in the outer surface of the iris they cannot transmit brown to that portion of their children's eyes. This absent characteristic may be one that has been lost or it may never have been acquired. It is known in heredity language as a recessive. Hence, to repeat, two recessives produce in their offspring only their recessive condition.

The hereditary behavior of brown eye color, however, is very different. In brown eyes actual pigment occurs in the iris. Here there is something accumulated to hand on down to subsequent generations. The amount that can be transmitted, however, depends on one's own hereditary history as well as that of one's consort. If both of Smith's parents belong to brown eyed strains, then Smith can have only brown eyes. And since Smith has been given, as it were, a double dose of brown his eyes will be dark brown.

Smith will have, in his turn, only brown eyed children, whatever may be the color of his wife's eyes. In the language of heredity, Smith's brown eye color dominates over blue or gray. When Smith's brown eye color has been derived from one parent only, then his own eyes will tend to be light-

Where He Struck.

"Yes, sir, I've been a soldier and once came mighty near being mixed up in a battle, and if it hadn't been for obeying the orders of our old colonel, who was a regular brick, I might be sleeping with my martial cloak round me now."

"Why, how was that?" asked a listener.

"Well, the enemy were in sight, and we were getting ready to go for 'em. I wasn't feeling the least bit comfortable, when all of a sudden up jumps the old colonel on a stump and shouts: "Now, then, boys, up and at 'em! Strike for home and country!"

"Some of them—a good many, in fact—struck for their country, but I struck for home and precious glad I am I did it."—London Weekly Telegraph.

Why?

The sunshine smiles and d'es away,
 The planets circle through the sky,
 Each hour fades into yesterday,
 And we can only murmur, "Why?"
 —Washington Star.

The ice man goes and waves farewell,
 And comes the coal man by and by,
 The schoolboy hears the ringing bell,
 And we can only murmur, "Why?"
 —Denver Post.

The deadbeat's plea is always "Give,"
 And a mock tear bedims his eye,
 He says that he has got to live,
 And we can only murmur, "Why?"
 —Houston Post.

The editors get in a huff,
 "What awful rot!" their looks imply,
 But "poets" ('t) still turn out this stuff,
 Though nobody can tell us why.
 —Atlanta Constitution.
