FREEZING WATER.

Conditions That Cause the Bursting or Cracking of Ice.

Ice never bursts from freezing. As soon as the liquid of which it is composed is frozen solid expansion ceases. The cracking or bursting of ice is brought about in this way: When water is subjected to extreme cold ice crystals will gradually form on its surface until the same are covered with a thin coat of what appears to be wet snow. From this outer coating of ice crystals all subsequent freezing goes downward, the ice thickening according to the degree of cold. The water which is being converted into ice now begins to expand, creating a pressure upon the unfrozen water below. This pressure is both downward and outward, and in case the water under observation is in a vessel the sides and bottom of the receptacle supply the resistance.

As the freezing process continues the pressure upon the confined water and air in the interior of the bulk increases until something yields. If the vessel be stronger than the ice stratum that has formed over the surface the layer of ice will be bent upward at the center, that being the weakest point, on account of the fact that the outer edges of the congealed mass are frozen fast to the sides of the vessel in which the experiment is being made. In this condition the center of the ice continues to rise or bulge until it bursts from the resistance of the water below. Could the vessel be tapped from below and the water drawn off no amount of freezing would be sufficient to crack or bulge the ice layer on the surface.

A Sad Mistake.

The wife cooked a dish of prunes, which appeared to find no favor with members of the family. The prunes "went begging" for a dog or two until the husband, tired of seeing them, decided to get rid of them.

The next evening he found a big dish of prunes at his place. "You liked those other prunes so well," said his wife, "that I thought I would cook some more."—Indianapolis News.

The Simple Life.

Let me scan the table Ere the bell is rung: Mother's malted milk jar, Father's potted tongue, Brother's coffee extract, Sister's peanut cakes, Grandmother's bouillon tablets, Baby's toasted flakes, Quart of boiling water, Bowl of shredded bran— Bless me, this is pleasant— Dining from a can! —Judge.

Rescue De Luxe.

"Hurry up and save that girl," bawled the fire chief. "Why don't you hurry?"

The fireman bent over and whispered down three stories.

"I'll have her on the ladder in a minute, chief. I'm waiting for her to curl her hair."—Kansas City Journal.

His Record.

"I have no wealth to bring to you," He said, "my rose, my queen, But I've a heart that's pure and true, A record that is clean."

"Nay," she replied, "I'm not your queen!" His heart within him sank. "You tell me that your record's clean, But I've a heart that's pure and true, A record that is clean." —Chicago Record-Herald.
