CHICKENS' MEAL BOX.

Directions For Making a Self Feeding Hopper That Works Well.

A self feeding hopper may be made from a box purchased at the grocery store. A box sixteen inches deep, two feet wide and two and one-half feet long will make a very good hopper. The bottom of the box should form the back of the hopper.

The top of the box should be fastened with hinges to form a lid. The top of the box should be removed and slanted inward so as to leave a narrow space at the bottom for the mash to run out. The ends of the box should be sawed to suit the slanting board.

The lower side of the box should be fixed to hold the mash by nailing inch pieces around the edge. The box can be filled with the mash, giving the chickens a chance to eat what they desire. This will prove beneficial in the laying season. — Iowa Homestead.

EARTH AND OURSELVES.

"We have multiplied, but the earth has subdued us," says Dr. Cyril G. Hopkins of Illinois.

"Three things are necessary for the most profitable improvement and preservation of our upland prairie and timber soils — limestone, organic matter and phosphorus." — Country Gentleman.

Don't Forget the Farm Girls.

Do not forget the girls when the returns for the crops and animals are to be distributed among members of the family. The boys may have toiled in the fields and in the barns, and their work may merit special reward. Reward them and thus encourage them to undertake more next year. But do not forget the girls who have made it possible for you and their brothers to labor. They have borne the heat of summer around the kitchen range; they have endured the drudgery of the weekly laundry; the choice preserves, pickles, canned fruits, etc., are a result of their labor. — Farm and Ranch.

"Test Your Seed Corn!"

"Test your seed corn" as a slogan for every corn growing state in the Union would not be a bad one.

Do not trust to the other fellow to do the testing. Do it yourself. The germination box is the most convenient place to ascertain the bad from the good seed. When possible use seed testing 90 per cent or better. And then if the seed does not grow look to soil and seasonal causes for the poor stand. A good stand of good corn means good profit. — Farm and Fireside.

TIME GIVEN LAVEY TO PAY.

Indicted Man's Efforts to Clear up Claims Wins Court.

P. C. Lavey, former publicity manager of the La Grande Commercial club, under indictment in Portland for using the mails for fraudulent purposes in connection with real estate operations, appeared in the United States district court yesterday and pleaded guilty to the charge, his former plea of not guilty being withdrawn, says a Portland newspaper.

Assistant United States District Attorney Johnson stated to the court that the defendant had made representations that he was endeavoring to liquidate the claims, upon which the indictment was based, and for this reason he believed that his sentence should be deferred until he had a fair opportunity to do so. The claims are stated to be close to $20,000, but Lavey has reason to believe that within 30 days he can show the court clearances on all of them and the sentence was deferred until March 31, he being released until that time under the same bonds as have existed in his case.

No immunity or agreement has been made with Lavey of any kind, but his effort to correct his mistakes undoubtedly will have weight with the court when the sentence is pronounced.
