The Story Bunsen Told.

Bunsen, the great German scientist, was extremely absentminded. He had had his evening clothes put out that he might attend a card party to which he had been invited, but forgot all about it until the next morning, when his man pointed out that the evening clothes had not been worn. And then he remarked to himself, "I know what I'll do." That evening he put on his dress clothes, went to the lady's house at the appointed time and walked in as if it were the day upon which he had been invited. The hostess, much too polite to tell him that he had mistaken the evening and that the party had taken place on the previous night, sent her friends asking them to come in to play a rubber again. They did so. In the course of the evening the conversation turned on absentmindedness, and Bunsen began to tell them what had happened to him a long time ago—how that he had forgotten an invitation and how he had made up his mind to go the next night—and thus he told the party the whole story, forgetting altogether that he was giving them an account of what was happening at the very moment.

No Sense of Humor.

One man met another man on the street, and the first man said to the second man: "Hello, Jim! You're just the man I wanted to see. I have a new one for you." "A new what?" asked the second man of the first man suspiciously. "A new conundrum." "There ain't any such thing. If it's good it ain't new, and if it's new it ain't"— "Cut it! Now listen. What's the difference between a poet and a plumber?" "Aw, that's easy. A poet never has any money, and a"— "You're way off. Anybody knows that difference. Now, listen; here's the answer. A poet pipes a lay and a plumber lays a"— "My plumber don't. He"— "Aw, what's the use of telling a good joke to a man without a sense of humor?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Forty Year Test.

An article must have exceptional merit to survive for a period of forty years. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was first offered to the public in 1872. From a small beginning it has grown in favor and popularity until it has attained a world wide reputation. You will find nothing better for a underand why it is a favorite after cough or cold. Try it and you will find a period of more than forty years. It not only gives relief—it cures. For sale by all dealers.
