The Amber Industry.

The business of obtaining amber from the ocean has been for long a state monopoly in Prussia. The chief center of the industry is in the province of eastern Prussia. The gathering of the amber goes on throughout the year, but it is most profitable at the time of the equinoctial storms, when the winds and the waves throw it ashore. After a storm the fishermen drag the beach. They deposit the haul upon the strand, where the women and children pick out the pieces of amber from among the seaweeds. The pieces are assorted according to size, color and form. The value of a piece of amber is enhanced when it bears the impressions of plant or animal substances. The prices of the pieces vary from about 13 cents to 75 cents, but may reach to $100 or more. The price per pound runs from about $1.25 to $7.50. A very large piece sometimes attains the weight of sixteen or seventeen ounces. The color is most commonly the familiar yellow, but it may be reddish brown or emerald green or creamy color and some pieces are quite white. The total yield is valued at $1,500,000 a year.—Harper's Weekly.

Long Arm of Coincidence.

An amusing story from the suburbs concerns a householder who recently bought two theater tickets for his wife and himself, but inadvertently invited another married couple to spend the same evening at his house. When the mistake was discovered it was decided to hand the tickets to another friend rather than ask the expected guests to come on a subsequent evening. But the man to whom the tickets were given was called out of town, and he in turn hurriedly handed them over to a near neighbor, suggesting the latter should take his wife to the play. Now, this is where the long arm of coincidence comes in. The near neighbor and his wife were the invited guests of the purchaser of the tickets. They thought it would be a pity to lose the chance of such a fine dramatic treat, and, not knowing the real origin of the tickets, they wrote a note explaining the situation and used the two seats which their hosts had meant for themselves.—Glasgow News.

Changes His Face Quarterly.

He came to the club lunch—the youngest member—and was scarcely recognized, for he was clean shaven. We had known him with a mustache with navy cut beard, with an imperial, and with several other changes on the cheeks, chin and lip. But the clean shaven man was a wonder for a few moments—until some one said, "Yes, it is!" And the young man with the naked face confessed his identity. And he explained the reason for the change. "I don't mind shaving," said the young man, "and I don't mind having my hair cut now and then. But what I really object to is having to get up every morning and looking at this same silly face in the glass. I'm going to alter it now and then. I've an architectural scheme that will rather surprise you. You can change your face every three months and enjoy the fun in the looking glass."—London Graphic.

A School Coinage.

It is not a generally known fact that the Bluecoat school (Christ's hospital) once possessed a coinage of its own. At that time the coin of the realm could not be used at the hospital. Before he could buy anything in the "tuck shop" a new boy had to get one of the beadles, who were the school money changers, to change his shillings and pence into "house money," as it was called. This was made of copper, the coins being octagonal in shape, with their values stamped on them. These curious coins are now very rare, and numismatists possessing any are fortunate.—London Globe.

Meeting Requirements.

A woman buying groceries was annoyed by the whistling of the clerk who waited on her. She complained to the proprietor about it, and after she had gone that worthy gazed with a soul shaking frown on the boy and inquired why he had been so rude. "Didn't you tell me the other day if I said that lady anything on time I'd have to whistle before I got my money?" inquired the clerk, who felt sure of his ground.—Indianapolis News.

Out of Place.

A sentry, an Irishman, was on post duty for the first time at night when the officer of the day approached. He called, "Who comes there?" "Officer of the day," was the reply. "Then what are yez doin' out at night?" asked the sentry.—Rural Life.

A Hard Job.

"Good gracious! What makes you look like that? Has anything happened?" "Well, I had my portrait painted recently by an impressionist, and I'm trying to look like it!"—Pilegunde Blatter.

"UNWRITTEN LAW" STEWARD BILL

METTA CHAMBERLAIN, WHEELER PLAYERS, STEWARD TONIGHT IN ETHEL BARRYMORE'S GREAT PLAY, "THE UNWRITTEN LAW."

"The Unwritten Law," that great play made famous by Miss Ethel Barrymore, is the offering of the Wheeler players at the Steward tonight. This is one of the best plays in their large repertoire and one which gives Miss Chamberlain a great chance to show her versatility. The Pendleton papers spoke very highly of the play and the production all through, and drew one of the largest houses there that the company had in their two weeks' stay. The play is billed as the play "that is different."

The entire company are all seen in congenial roles, and altogether, a production that will make you glad you saw this great play. Tickets at Van Buren's cigar store.

us given to building activities in Pendleton and the sound of the saw is becoming familiar again.

Among the more extensive improvements now under way are the two concrete livery barns, one on east Court street and one on Cottonwood. Both are to replace old wooden structures and answer the demand of the times. Mrs. Ida Fowler is constructing the Court street building on her lot opposite the Court house which has been occupied by the Telephone stables for some years. The old structure has been torn down already and the excavation for the new is well under way. A large tent has been stretched on the lot just to the east of the building used as a temporary home for the stables.

Gibson and Cole have the contract for the barn on Cottonwood street and the excavation work is now nearly done. The building will be one of concrete and will also be constructed that if Cottonwood street ever becomes a principal business thoroughfare, it can conveniently be changed into a store building and another story for offices added.

On west Webb street, John Lang the groceryman, is raising a new building which will house his store.

Among the new residences soon to be built are a handsome $5000 bungalow on west Jackson street by A. W. Rugg, and a $2500 bungalow on Perkins avenue by Edgar F. Averill.

The excavation for both is now almost done and actual construction work will soon begin.

Mrs. John Greulich is doing some improvement work to her property on west Jackson street.

Mr. and Mrs. Westbrooke Dickson have completed their little bungalow on the south hill and are now moving into it.

A building permit was issued this morning to Rose L. Hamilton to build a six room, one story bungalow at 713 Lillet street, to cost approximately $1800. A permit was also issued to Fred Searcy to enlarge his house at 111 Lincoln street by building an addition and porch and also to make interior changes. The whole will cost about $350.

The latest type of sanitary steam pressing machine, which injects steam into the garment, sterilizes it, raises the nap and leaves the cloth soft and bright.

It costs more than a flat iron, but it does the work RIGHT.
