WHEN PETE BROWNING MISUNDERSTOOD HURST.

In the old days when Buck Ewing and King Kelly were National league stars and Charley Comiskey, Biddy McPhee and Toad Ramsey occupied the spotlight in the old American association Tony Mullane, afterward — yes, long afterward — a pitcher, was in the heyday of his career. It was said of Tony that he could pitch with either hand and that just to bother batters — after he had a game, won — he would throw one ball with his right arm and the next with his left.

Tim Hurst one day said to Pete Browning, the Louisville outfielder and great slugger: "This Tony Mullane is ambidextrous, isn't he, Pete?" "Reckon so," was Pete's response. "They do say's how he kin swim as well as he kin pitch."

A Revised Order. Real Estate Agent—Good morning, sir. What can I do for you? William, bring the gentleman a cigar. Do you want to buy a lot? Caller—No; I want to sell one. Agent—William never mind the cigar.—Boston Transcript.

There will be a terrible slump in vaudeville when the ballplayers have to leave for spring training camps.
