No Doubt.

Ohio now has a stringent corrupt practices act, which aims to do away entirely with the use of money in politics. In speaking of the emancipation of prominent men from the necessity of making contributions to every public enterprise and selfish person, Judge William E. Scoville of the Buckeye State tells this story:

"It reminds me of Jim Fisk, the rail road king of the seventies. Jim always gave freely to the institutions in the little town from which he came. His name was on every subscription list, but he balked one day when he was asked to send $100 for putting a new fence around the village cemetery. In denying the request he wrote:

"I don't see any use for a fence around a graveyard. Those on the outside don't want to get in, and those on the inside can't get out."

"I told this story to an Englishman last year when I was abroad. After ruminating a few minutes he said: "Aw, I think your Mr. Fisk was about hawf right; really I do."—The Popular Magazine.

Zoological Myths.

Certain creatures oft heard of, pray who ever saw?

There's the camel whose back broke beneath the last straw.

There's the wonderful goose that laid eggs of pure gold

And the bull that got in where the china was sold.

There's the ass that the skin of a lion both wear

And the wrong pls we frequently get by the ear.

The wild horse that never-no, never—could drag

Us somewhere. There's the cat we let out of the bag.

There's the bird that goes whispering secrets around.

Whoever has seen it, whoever has found?

There's the oft mentioned dog in the manger that stands

And the elephant some one has got on his hands.

There's the ravenous wolf from our doors that we keep

And the wolf that goes round in the clothes of a sheep.

There's the nightmare that somebody tells us they've had.

There's the cat with nine lives, and the March hare that's mad.

And the fox that declared that the high grapes were sour.

And the grim dogs of war. It would take quite an hour

Just to list all the odd, freakish creatures that we

Nearly every day hear of, but never once see.

—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Sport Dangerous.

Miss Eleanor Sears, the athletic young Bostonian, was visiting recently at a country house where a good deal of flying is done.

Miss Sears, one cold and brilliant afternoon, appeared on the terrace of the mansion in a new and charming aviation costume.

"How do you like my new rig?" she asked as she approached a party of young men and women who were taking tea in the open air behind a glass wind screen.

One of the young men answered with a look of admiration:

"Beautiful! You are always dressed to kill. Today, though, you are dressed to be killed."—Minneapolis Journal.

Sonnet.

I've sometimes had a hunch that sage Ulysses

When, all his traipsing done, he'd gone to farming

In Ithaca, remembering the charming Calypso, Circe and those other misses

Whom he'd been wont to spoon with of course, this is

Purest conjecture, often thought that surely

He'd signed the pledge a trifle prematurely.

No joys compare with those we term "solonias."

So soft we think the very best Havana

Don't come up to the cork hunk sign-rocket

We smoked behind the barn and have regretted

(When buffed at Genevieve) for pignailed Anna.

Ah me, the Fortunate Isles of golden youth
