EATING APPLE HABIT WANTED

GENERAL APPLE EATING DAY
APRIL 5.

Object in View is to Get Public Acquainted With Apples.

Saturday, April 5th, 1913, will be "Apple Day" in Washington, by executive proclamation and universal sanction.

The object of the day is to get the public better acquainted with apples, and since someone has suggested the movement, it behooves all the rest of us to fall into line and partake of the palatable product of the orchard.

The Oregon-Washington Railroad & Navigation company will distribute apples free of charge on its dining cars on that day.

The apples grown in the Northwest surpass in beauty of appearance, uniformity of size and excellence of quality those grown in any other section of the United States, and no locality in the world yields fruit that excels the fruit of this section of the American continent. There is something in the air, the soil and the sunshine which blend to bring about perfection.

All this is true and yet we have not begun to understand the praise of this King of Fruits.

Observe the days by eating apples. Get the habit. It means health to those who partake. Bids defiance to the pharmacist's concoctions and mocks at the medical profession.

As a matter of fact, an apple is "good eating." What more can any reasonable person expect in the way of a diet?

"Calling the Meek"
Extolling the virtues of the African carrier, J. I. Harris in "Down the Darkest Africa" tells of a long caravan march through the "hills" when food ran short. "One of the natives suggested 'calling the meek.' Arriving at a quiet spot, a son of the forest fell on his knees, placed the tips of two fingers in his nostrils, emitted a series of calls which made that forest echo with, as it were, the joyous cries of a troop of monkeys. When he had repeated these peculiar sounds several places nearby for about half an hour there was an excited cry of 'Here they come!' And soon scores of monkeys could be seen slipping from tree to tree toward the immitable monkey cries of our carrier." Four were shot for the evening meal, and some of the men were so famished that they ate the flesh raw."

An Old Royal Romance.
Askub, the capital of the old Servian empire, is associated with one of the few real love affairs of a Turkish sultan. It was here, after the fatal field of Kosovo, that the sultan arranged terms of peace with the Servian King Stephen. One of the most important negotiations was that Stephen should hand over his sister, the Lady Despina, as wife of the sultan. It was a lucky deal for the Servians, for we are told that "of all his wives the sultan held the Lady Despina dearest and for her sake restored her brother the city and castle of Sembrinia and Columbarium, in Servia."

Placing Him.
"Now, I don't want your patent, can opener."
"A rare chance, madam."
"Don't want it."
"You'll regret your decision."
"Don't want it. I tell you."
"Opportunity, madam, knocks but once."
"Opportunity, eh? You look more like impotency."—Washington Herald.

Why We Can See Smoke.
Smoke is not composed of gases only, but of solid or perhaps partly liquid particles, which are mixed with the gases and carried along by them. It is these particles of matter that are visible to the eye and not the gases themselves.—St. Nicholas.

A Present.
He—What are you going to give Kitty and Jack for a wedding present?
She—Oh, I guess I'll send Kitty the bunch of letters Jack wrote me when we were engaged.—Boston Transcript.

If your face wants to smile let it; if it doesn't, make it.—Anon.

The Turk in Constantinople.
Terrible scenes were witnessed in Constantinople when Mohammed II. captured the city in 1453. When the conquerors entered, they slew 2,000 and made slaves of all who took refuge in the sanctuary of St. Sophia. Gibbon records the fate of the 60,000 prisoners: "Male captives were bound with cords, the females with their veils and girdles. The senators were linked with their slaves, the prelates with the porters of the church and young men of a plebeian class with noble maids whose faces had been invisible to the sun and their nearest kindred, and in this common state of captivity the ranks of society were confounded, the fates of nature were cut asunder, and the inexorable soldier was careless of the father's groans, the tears of the mother and the lamentations of the children."

Purifying the Air in Rooms.
To purify the air of offices or sick rooms soak a few pieces of brown paper in a solution of saltpeter and allow them to dry. When desired for use lay a handful of flowers of lavender, which can be got at any drug store, on a tin pan with a few pieces of the paper and light. The aroma is refreshing and agreeable and drives away insects. If hot water is procurable a few drops of oil of lavender in a glass of very hot water is good. It purifies the air at once and effectually rids the room of flies and insects of all kinds.—Scientific American.

Motorist's Luck.
"Well, Blithers, what luck did you have with your new car?" asked Jarrows.
"More than I ever expected," said Blithers. "Just three minutes after the darned thing blew up another car came along with a busted tire, and the owner bought my old tires for $10 apiece."—Harper's Weekly.

A Tragic Triolet.
I wrote it as plain as could be.
"Her cheeks were as red as a rose."
As an ardent and soul stirring plea
I wrote it as plain as could be.
It appeared, to the printer's great grief,
"Her cheeks were as red as her nose."
I wrote it as plain as could be.
"Her cheeks were as red as a rose."
—Judge.

TWO DORE SKETCHES.
One That Was Stolen and Another That Was Confiscated.
While Gustave Dore was at Ischl and wandering about the mountains he became much interested in a country wedding and sketched it on the spot. He put the sketch in a book in the pocket of his pastor and went back to the hotel to dinner. After dinner he looked for the sketch. It was gone. Angry at the theft, the artist called the landlord and made complaint, but no trace of the book was found. From Ischl Dore went to Vienna, and there he found a letter and a parcel awaiting him. The letter, which was anonymous, read thus:
"Sir: I stole your book at Ischl. The sketch was so charming that I could not resist the temptation of having it in my possession, and I knew very well that you would never consent to sell to me. But theft is neither my trade nor my habit, and I beg you to accept, as a souvenir of my crime and my enthusiasm for your talent, the walking stick which will reach you at the same time as this letter."
The cane was a massive one with a gold head, in which was set a gem of value.
"On another occasion the artist lost his passport while on a tour in Switzerland. At Lucerne he asked to be allowed to speak to the mayor, to whom he gave his name.
"You say that you are M. Gustave Dore, and I believe you," said the mayor, "but" and he produced a piece of paper and a pencil, "you prove it."

Dore looked around him and saw some peasants selling potatoes in the street. With a few clever touches he reproduced the homely scene and, appending his name to the sketch, gave it to the mayor.
"Your passport is all right," remarked the official, "but you must allow me to keep it and to offer you in return one of the ordinary form."—New York Sun.

SHUN LOOSE SHOES.
They Give the Feet as Much Trouble as the Pinching Kids.
Seven persons out of ten suffer excruciating pain at one time or another with their feet. A single corn no larger than a grain of sand can take all the snap and vitality right out of you. Two-thirds of modern foot troubles are due to the fact that almost every one—man, woman and child—wears shoes too loose. The shoe itself may be correct as to size and shape, but it is not fastened tight at the only point of control—namely, the instep.

When you set your foot upon the floor or pavement in the act of walking the shoe adheres, and if it be loosely fastened over the instep the foot pushes down into the toe of the shoe. At certain spots on the foot this slipping causes friction. These spots are the soles of the feet, the tops, ends and inner sides of the toes, the great and little toe joints and occasionally even the back of the heel.
When the friction thus caused is continued hour after hour and day after day one or more of these spots are almost sure to become inflamed and sore. A slight thickening, called a "callus," is formed. As the friction and pressure go on the resulting callus may thicken up unevenly. Then it is called a corn.—Woman's Home Companion.

Beware of the Dog!
In Jersey they have an interesting device for keeping off tramps and burglars—A watchdog, too ferocious and too valuable to be allowed to run loose, is tied to a rope about four feet long, and this rope is tied to a ring that runs loosely over a long wire about four feet from the ground. The wire stretches from the back porch to a pole at the end of the yard, and as the ring slips easily over it the dog has the full run of the yard without being able to bite visitors or innocent passers-by. The wire is practically invisible by night, and many a prowler has gone on his way a sadder but a wiser man after assuming from the looks of things in the front of the house that there wasn't any dog.—New York Mail.

Had No Fault to Find.
"Look here," he said to the groom, "are you the man who put the saddle on Miss Jeanie's horse?"
"Yes, sir. Anything wrong, sir?"
"It was loose, very loose. She had no sooner mounted than the saddle slipped, and if I hadn't caught her she would have been thrown to the ground."
"I'm very sorry, sir."
"But I did catch her," went on the young man meditatively. "I caught her in my arms, and—here's half a crown for you, John. Do you suppose you could leave the girl loose when we go riding again tomorrow?"—London Telegraph.

Both Members.
Belle and Ben had just announced their engagement.
"When we are married," said Belle, "I shall expect you to shave every morning. It's one of the rules of the club I belong to that none of its members shall marry a man who won't shave every morning."
"Oh, that's all right," replied Ben, "but what about the mornings I don't get home in time? I belong to a club too."—Lippincott's.
