“Freckles,” A Fine Attraction.

“Freckles,” dramatized from Gene Stratton-Porter's popular novel of that name, by Neil Twomey will be presented here for the first time at the Steward, May 20.

In making this dramatization Mr. Twomey has adhered closely to Mrs. Porter's charming story and has retained every one of the now famous characters that appear in the book. Consequently “Freckles” the plucky waif who guards the great Limberlost; the swamp Angel, of whom Freckles dreams; McLean, who befriends Freckles; Mrs. Duncan, who gives a mother's love and a home to Freckles; Duncan, of McLean's timber gang; the Bird Woman; the Man of Affairs; Lord and Lady O'Moore, who come from Ireland in quest of a lost relative; Wessner, a timber thief, who wants rascality made easy;

Jack, the villain, to whom thoughts of repentance comes too late; as well as Sears, a camp cook, all appear to advantage in the important and effective life studies.
