High weeds in the right garden, coupled with Corbin's costly errors made it posible for Paddy Welch to get away with the afternoon game of a two-game day Sunday when the Walla Walla Bears won the last game of the Sababth after La Grande had taken healthy lead in the first inning. A single that fell in a forest of weeds resulted in a home run with the bases full, while Curtiss got out his spyglasses to locate the pill. Corbin had a bad day of it, one of the very few he has, but his boot had let in the score just ahead of the lucky home-run swat. Fitcher started out like a whirlwind and fanned six of the first seven putouts, the Squads behind him in the meanwhile connecting with Welch, poling out a tripple and enough singles to make four runs. It looked like easy pickings but in the sixth Fitcher weakened with the combinations mentioned above, and the deed was done. The Bears made it one more in the seventh after Martini doubled with Davis was on with transportation to first. Except for the sixth and seventh Fitcher burned them over with such telling force and strikeout regularity that there was nothing to it. But Welch had only the one bad inning.

He arose to the occasion in the eighth and wormed himself out of a hole that saved the game for him—hence he lost it and won it again. For all that it was a pretty game, especially if one didn't look farther than the pitcher's box for either man deserved to win.

Morning Game Classy.

In the morning while the players should have been at Sundty school, some classy ball was reaied off with about three sensations to make it so. In the first place, James was clever—very clever—and only once did he really need support and then he got it, for in ninth inning Druhot ran back into the weeds of the ravine in left field and jerked down a drive from Martini's willow that looked good for, of say three bases. The third sensation was the pitching of Schoolboy "Mickey" Shader. The lad with the thin legiets was able to put over the pan precisely what Brown called for and it was always with difficulty that the Spuds got on at all. Walla Walla scored her lone tally in the second when Lundstrom doubled and Corbin juggled Kelly's hit. From then on into the eighth it sure was a pippin of a game with fielders and pitchers and umpire working like a well regulated malley engine. La Grande earned victory by Corbin's double in the eighth, and though Fitcher pinch hit for Lewis, it was an easy out, to Davis. King got away with a lucky hit and Neadu came on with a fielder's choice while Druhot singled. Peterson walked out and the side went out on Curtiss' hit. The scoring ended when Druhot batted in King. Corbin scored first. ly a poorly thrown ball, and Richardson called Corbin safe by a hair. Only a handful saw the contest, but ew better games have been played on the fairgrounds park.
