CHAPTER 1.

(By Mrs. Georgia Gasset.)

It was in the autumn, a bright September day and the morning sun had begun to warm the air, when Bessie and I wandered along the woodland path to the little log school house. We were sisters, she was six and I was eight years old, this was to be our first day at school. Our father had been dead two years, mother was left with a small farm from which to obtain a livelihood for herself and children. She had a hard task before her, for there was not much to be made off the farm and we were not old enough to do anything but the chores. Sometimes mother would tell us what a good and noble man our father was and then she would ask us to try and be like him, so every one would like us.

She wanted to give us a good education, so a few days before school commenced Uncle John took mother to town and she purchased some new dresses and other things necessary for us to have for school.

The morning there were no girls any more proud than we were as we kissed our dear mother good bye and started for school. When we arrived at the school house, Miss Winters met us at the door with a cheery smile and a hearty welcome. Miss Winters was to be our teacher. She seemed scarcely eighteen and was tall and slender, with dark eyes and hair and the roses of good health blossomed upon her cheeks. She told us where to put our books and asked us our names which I told her were Bessie and Edna Brown. Bessie was shy and said nothing while I talked on and told of our home and mother.

Presently other pupils began to arrive and when all were there Miss Winters rang the bell and we all repaired to our respective seats and began studying our lessons. The noon hour soon came, and gradually we became acquainted with the other pupils; the teacher captured our young hearts at the very beginning, so, happily, our school days began and we looked forward with bright hopes into an unknown future.

Surprising Cure of Stomach Trouble.
When you have trouble with your stomach or chronic constipation, don't imagine that your case is beyond help just because your doctor fails to give you relief. Mrs. G. Stengele, Plainfield, N. J., writes: "For over a month past I have been troubled with my stomach. Everything I ate upset it terribly. One of Chamberlain's advertising booklets came to me. After reading a few of the letters from people who had been cured by Chamberlain's Tablets, I decided to try them. I have taken nearly three-fourths of a package of them and can now eat almost everything that I want." For sale by all dealers. Adv.
