BLUE-SKY LAW IS EXPLAINED

COMMISSIONER WATSON INTERPRETS MEASURE.

Affidavit of Exemption Clause Made Clear by State Official.

In the operation of the blue sky bill governing corporations operating in Oregon, there have arisen all over the state many questions which have been the subject of much discussion among lawyers and business men. The principal question of doubt was whether "investment companies," which is the name by which all corporations subject to the act are called, should file an affidavit of exemption or they should send in information required by the blue sky act for all investment companies upon the blank called a "preliminary statement." Upon this subject Corporation Commissioner Watson has made a statement in which he rules that all investment corporations which have not disposed of all of their stock or bonds or other securities are subject to the new law. Any corporation that has stock or other securities on hand must furnish the corporation department a preliminary statement.

"It follows," agree local attorneys "that small ditch companies and other like corporations having nothing more to do except to pay their annual taxes should execute the affidavit of exemption and thus will not be subject to further attention from the state in administering the blue sky law."

LAMAR AGAIN RECITES STORY OF DUPLICITY

RECALLED TO STAND AT HIS OWN REQUEST TO THE COMMITTEE.

LAUTERBAUGH PROMPTS ACT

Lamar Affirms He Had Told Lauterbach of His Impersonations Over the Telephone and of Then Sending Lauterbach to Morgan's Agent With Proposition Over Steel Trust Inquiry.

Washington, July 8.—David Lamar the New York broker who admitted he impersonated certain congressmen and others in conversations over the telephone with prominent New York financiers, was recalled by the lobby committee at his own request today. In his opening statement, Lamar said he was satisfied to leave his fate in the hands of Chairman Overman and Senators Nelson and Cummins.

"As far as Senators Reed and Walsh are concerned," he started to say, but was interrupted by Chairman Overman who squelched any attempt to stir friction in the members of the committee. Lamar then reiterated he had planned impersonations of Congressmen Riordan of New York and Palm of Pennsylvania in order to unearth what he called a conspiracy against his friend, Edward Lauterbach.

"It was a Wall street plan," Lamar continued, "designed to bring Lewis Cass Ledyard and associates out into the open."

"Many men before now wanted to get him. It was a game of duplicity on their part as well as mine and wanted to give them an open and shut case so they would have to come into the open so I used Lauterbach's name and then wanted to give them prepared evidence that Lauterbach lied. They fell for the trap. I felt certain Ledyard knew it was I who was talking, not Palmer. My ear and Brown's was so attuned that I could hear him putting the branch telephone lines on I called for Ledyard, and offered him the entire national government in a partnership with the Morgan company except the president. I knew my man and knew his nature. Then I went to Lauterbach and sent him to Ledyard because I knew Ledyard would think he had Lauterbach in a lie."

Edward Lauterbach under cross-examination by the Senate lobby committee yesterday, admitted he had approached Lewis Cass Ledyard, of counsel for J. P. Morgan, with the statement that he represented Speaker Clark and Senator Stone, but had done so at the direction of David Lamar.

Lauterbach had denied on direct examination yesterday that he had made such statements to Ledyard. Lauterbach then testified on direct examination that he went to the late J. P. Morgan with the resolution for investigating the steel corporation, not for the purpose of "shaking him down" but solely with the idea that if Morgan would personally ask Lamar to stop the resolution the broken relations between the two men would be restored.

Lauterbach denied on direct examination that he knew of Lamar's impersonations of congressmen in telephone conversations with Wall street leaders and that his proposal to stop Congressional investigation of the steel corporation was to have the corporation make certain reforms which would make an investigation unnecessary. It
