Two Banana Days This Week

The Grocers have designated Tuesday and Thursday of this week Banana Day. On these two days only Bananas will be sold at 25c per dozen. The price is not the result of any unfavorable condition of the market or any slump in the price but a local arrangement to stimulate the trade and move Bananas. "A Banana a day keeps the Doctor away." It is a good, wholesome food that enters into the dietary every day in the year. It's both meat and bread and is not intended solely for the plutocrat or millionaire, at the usual price it is a splendid food value as compared to the cost of other edibles but the price of 25c on Banana Day places this delicacy within the reach of the most economical buyers. READ THIS

Have just received my patent deed on a New Invention; a household necessity. I can show anyone that it is the best in its line that has been invented. Anyone wanting to make money out of a small investment, had better investigate my proposition immediately; time is opportunity--will only be here a few days.
