LIKE A PARENT IN DANGER.

La Grande people watched with fear and trembling the raging furnace that consumed the great product of the George Palmer Lumber company with much the same feeling that a child watches earnestly a parent that is in danger. The big mill with its auxiliary plant for several hours seemed doomed to burn and fully three thousand people gathered at the plant hoping against hope that something would happen to save the institution which is in reality one of the pillars of La Grande's commercial life. Men fought fire as they never fought before; the gallantry and bravery of the local volunteer department is to always be remembered. The risk of life and limb was secondary—when something needed to be done, it was done by one man while a hundred waited anxiously for their turn to render assistance.

Although quite an army of firemen worked, we say firemen for they all proved themselves worthy of the title—there was at least a thousand men in reserve waiting impatiently to be called upon to help, if possible to save La Grande's great industrial plant.

It is only in time of trouble that we find out who are real friends, and we know that Mr. Palmer and his associates today cannot but feel deeply the closeness of their institution to the hearts and lives of the people of this community.

When it was apparent that the great mill would be saved a feeling of relief and satisfaction swept over the fire fighters. Effective had been their efforts, assisted by nature in laying the wind, and La Grande would be spared the loss of a plant that first started this city on the high, broad road to commercial prosperity.

While the loss is tremendous there is ample cause left for rejoicing in the fact that the mill stands.

We say to the men who fought that terrific blaze, well done. You have earned the sincere praise that is today being heaped upon you.

WHY NOT SIMPLER LIVING?

One of the chief reasons why fewer people marry today is the inability of the average man to get a situation that will pay enough to support a family in the present period of growing extravagance and luxury, says Arthur Cooper, a man who belongs to the self-made class of men, and then he continues:

We hear a great deal nowadays about the increased cost of living, but there is reason to believe that costly and extravagant living is more to blame than an increased cost of the necessities of life. From whatever source we seek information, the evidence all tends to show that individually and collectively we have become a nation of spendthrifts. Public economy is almost a lost art. And we have developed a craze of extravagance in dress that to the extent in which it affects all classes, probably surpasses any similar excess in the whole world's history.

The worst of it is we are rearing boys and girls in these wrong ideas. The mother in the average home has a mistaken notion that the daughters should be spared anything like real work. She fails to understand how necessary is this discipline for everyone. Parents want their children to be better situated and have more than they themselves had. If this idea were carried out sensibly, as to environment and education, it would be all right, but often times the results would be better if children had to endure some of the trials and hardships that their parents met and overcame.

If more parents would teach their sons and daughters the value of money and would point out to them the good and the wholesome things of life, there would be fewer crimes, fewer wretched lives, fewer unhappy people in the divorce courts, and fewer girls in houses of shame. If the pauper and criminals, who are a drain on society and an annoyance to all well-intentioned citizens, had been given this training when young, few if any of them would have become public leeches.

Why not a country wide crusade for simpler living, and at least a partial return to the thrift and rules of plain living that characterized our fathers? Why not get back to that dignified simplicity which brings far more health and joy? This does not mean miserliness, cheeseparing, squeezing and saving every possible cent at the expense of comfort, health and self-respect, but it means thrift, wholesome living that will help people into comfortable circumstances, banish the worry of debt and lead to health and happiness.

Would it not be feasible to set aside an hour once a week in the school room for the teaching of thrift as a praiseworthy virtue? Who will say that the millions of boys and girls now growing up will not be vastly more efficient as useful citizens and as producers of wealth, if habits of thrift and higher ideals in the use of money, are instilled into them.

One thing is certain: If this country is to have permanent prosperity, the people must practice more self-denial. We are losing sight of the best things of life. There must be new standards, new ideals, a new point in view for well-being of rich and poor alike. We must see in society not an institution
