ROYAL ANN CHERRY CROP

fresh cherries to the same company at Portland, or a total of 44,000 lbs., making a grand total for La Grande and Cove of 478,000 pounds of Royal Ann and Centennials, handled by this company alone. The company has contracted about 60 tons more of this variety, which will be stored in the next few days. Sixty tons more will add another 120,000 pounds to the total, making it 598,000, well over the half million mark. At 3 1-2 cents $20,930 will be distributed in sums ranging from 64c to over two thousand among 350 cherry growers. It must be borne in mind that when some data on Bings and other varieties are available the sum in dollars and cents will grow immensely. It must also be remembered that the figures just given represent the cherries that will leave or have left this valley for all parts of the world, and do not include home consumption.

All barreled cherries are preserved in a solution of sulphuric acid, lime and water, and are afterwards converted into the fancy Maraschino cherry, used in lemonades, cocktails and on candies.

The story of this cherry is exceedingly interesting, and involves many hands and much money. The solution robs the cherry of its color and makes it white, the Maraschino process restores the color. In the course of six months or a year, the same cherry will come back to you cityfied, Europeanized, unrecognized, save on the grocer's bill (1 bottle Maraschino cherries) preferred stock, 75c; thirty-one cherries actual count, when there are in the neighborhood of 300 cherries in a gallon, for which the grower received less than 30c, when they were plucked from the tree.

The grower planted the tree, pruned it (sometimes) sprayed it (less times) and all cost money. The picker received 4c and 5c a gallon, the farmer 3 1-2 cents a pound. The men engaged in weighing and barreling, the railroad for hauling, the labor employed to unload, the nimble fingers that pick them over, remove the pits and stems, the "dope" they were preserved in, the barrels and the red stuff that makes them taste like pickled leather, the stenographers that wrote letters about them, the managers that laid awake nights speculating on the condition in which the cherries would arrive, the paper that indicated where they were supposed to be and were not, the cost of locating and re-weighting, the bottles they finally thought they would rest in, the boxes they were shipped in, and the old crusty marking pot that labeled these boxes—another railroad trip, another trip on a jostling express wagon, more marking and counting, more rent and storage, another bit of scribbling on a grocer's pad, one last ride on a grocer's wagon and one good Royal Ann has finally reached the consumer at 1c per, after a matter of expense all along, from its pendant berth on a La Grande cherry tree, to its final home of rest in a fashionable cafe at Rectors or Monte Carlo, much less a cherry than when it fell into the picker's bucket.

The cherry has increased enormously in value. Did the farmer get what it was worth? Could he have gotten 3 1-2c a pound if a big company had not invested huge sums to take them off his hands? Figure the enormous loss in fruit itself, in time, the great expense and the percentage of gain went cause any federal investigation. However, it can be said that what they can do in Portland they can do in La Grande.

The Best Medicine in the World.

"My little girl had bloody dysentery very bad. I thought she would die. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy cured her and I can truthfully say that I think it is the best medicine in the world," writes Mrs. William Orvis, Clare, Mich. For sale by all dealers.

A Good Investment.

W. D. Magli, a well known merchant of Whitewater, Wis., bought a stock of Chamberlain's medicine so as to be able to supply them to his customers. After receiving them he was himself taken sick and says that one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy was worth more to him than the cost of his entire stock of these medicines.

GRANDMOTHER USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER FADED OR GRAY HAIR

Mixed With Sulphur It Makes Hair Soft, Beautiful; Cures Dandruff.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But the brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, which is usually too sticky, so insist upon getting Wyeth's, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well known down-town druggist says his customers insist on Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because, they say, it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. Do this at night and by morning the gray disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.
