POULTRY HAS WON A NICHE

NO LONGER ADMITTEDLY INFERIOR BIRD.

Timely Hints About Raising Chickens and Ducks.

By Michael K. Boyer, the Rural Spirit.
No longer is the hen looked upon as an insignificant little creature, and the business of raising poultry and eggs for market as the work of a crank. The writer well remembers when even the United States government ignored this industrious worker; at that time we never read nor heard of a scientific argument in her favor, save what appeared in the poultry journals.

But it is different today. We now have men in all stations of life engaging in poultry culture, and at least a half dozen millionaires have poultry farms of their own, and take great pride in both the fancy and utility qualities of their flocks. At least two ex-presidents of this country engaged in poultry culture after having left the White House, as also did one ex-vice president.

It has gotten to that point that it has become a question whether the American hen had not better take the place of the picturesque eagle that has so long adorned the money issued by the United States government.

When shipping dressed poultry to market, all the whims and fancies of the trade must be catered to. Appearance has much to do with the sale. A neatly dressed, plump carcass, free from pin feathers, at once attracts the attention of the buyer. It is a good idea to tag each carcass, and on this tag advertise the name and address of the farm that produced the carcass. It will lead people to call for your goods. Yellow skin and flesh do not necessarily denote quality of flesh, but the market calls for such, and it is up to the poulturer to produce it. A full breast, broad back and plump body gives the ideal appearance.

There is a prejudice in the market regarding the color of the egg shell. It is a prejudice of long standing, and will, without doubt, remain with the buying public. The average American market prefers a brown color while New York City is ready to pay a premium for white shelled eggs. The brown egg buyers in particular claim that the eggs are of a richer flavor. All this is imagination, when we come to understand that it is food and not color of shell that flavors the egg. Is it reasonable to suppose the brown egg of the Brahma fed on onions could be as sweet as the white egg of the Leghorn fed on clover?

It is not profitable to treat fowls suffering with contagious disease. It is a better move to at once destroy all such cases—there may be an epidemic. The lighter ailments, such as colds, for instance, should be very promptly treated, and we know of nothing better than a quinine pill (one grain) each night for about a week; four drops of tincture of aconite in a half pint of drinking water, is a good remedy for a cold that shows itself by sneezing. When a fowl is droopy, loss of appetite, and the comb and wattles do not have that bright look they have in health, very often a family liver pill will work wonders. The duck generally lays at night

It thrives best on soft, succulent food. Strong, vigorous birds can be successfully bred at four years of age. When properly fed, when at eight weeks of age, green ducks will weigh nine pounds to the pair. At ten weeks they should weigh ten to eleven pounds to the pair. The best prices for green ducks is given about May 1st. Then the price gradually declines until the month of July.

While clover is the richest in lime. Feeding clover is a preventive of soft-shelled eggs. Cut clover hay has helped revolutionize the poultry business. Red clover hay contains about twenty-eight pounds of lime to the thousand pounds. Scald the clover hay at night, and keep it covered, so it can steam. See that the clover is cut to one-half inch lengths. When longer it is apt to pack in the crop, causing crop-bound.

Millet seed is an excellent egg-producing grain. Beans being highly nitrogenous are equally beneficial. Sorghum and broom corn seeds will do to add variety to the bill of fare. Barley is about of the same merit. Popcorn contains more nitrogen and phosphate than does the regular Indian corn. Buckwheat is an egg-producing food, but must be fed sparingly, as it is overfattening.

An old time theory said that hens without the attention of a male would lay as well, but not be so apt to become broody, as those mated. Our records show they will lay as well, but unmated flocks are not broody-proof by any means. The past season our unmated birds with a few exceptions, became broody first, while two-year-old hens were the last to show any signs.

Where the attention of the male becomes a perfect harassment, the nervous derangement may decrease the egg record. It is therefore, safest to have not less than ten females mated to each male bird, and after breeding season it is best to remove the male from the flock altogether. Hens will lay just as well without the attention of a male as with them.

During incubation, eggs should be tested on the seventh and fourteenth days. At the first test the air cell should measure about a quarter of an inch, on the tenth day a half inch; fifteenth day, five-eighths inch; nineteenth day, three-quarters inch. The measurement should be taken from the middle of the large end.

Rye is the poorest of poultry grains. Corn and buckwheat should be fed sparingly, as they are very fattening. Wheat leads as a well balanced food, and barley is a close second. Feeding too much buckwheat has a tendency to produce a white skin and light colored yolks in eggs.

Malthoid Roofing

We want builders to see us about roofing. We want to demonstrate why it is to your advantage to roof your building with Malthoid Roofing—and we will do this to your complete satisfaction.

We will show you beyond any question that Malthoid is the very highest type of roofing perfection and made so well that it will last as long as the building it covers. We will show you that Malthoid is a better roofing than shingles—is more satisfactory than iron—is cheaper than tin—in fact, we can prove that there is no other roofing known to the building trades that is as good—as durable—as long lasting—as water proof—as fire resisting and as cheap as Malthoid Roofing.

It has got every other brand of ready roofing marking time while it is progressing—there is more of it sold on the Pacific Coast than all other brands combined and it speaks well for the intelligence of builders that this is so.

The makers of Malthoid Roofing know their business for they have been at it for twenty-six years and they not only make this roofing to sell but they make it to last and to please the people who buy it.

They would rather have the good will of the builder than his money—and they get both by the way they make Malthoid Roofing.

If you have roof troubles of any kind or of any description—no matter what kind of a roof you have on your building, see us at once and we will help you out of your difficulty.
