HOOD RIVER FRUIT FIRST

SEASON'S FIRST SHIPMENT OF FRUIT UNDER NEW PLAN.

Portland Receives First Big Consignment From Hood River.

Portland, Ore., Aug. 19.—(Special)—Hood River will have the honor of being practically the first section of the country to send forward a brand of apples that will be advertised under the projected campaign.

The formation of the Hood River Fruit Growers' exchange by some of the leading producers of the world-famous section, will start the ball a-rolling in the advertising campaign, which has for its dual object the securing of a better market for producers and the obtaining of better fruit by consumers.

The Hood River Fruit Growers' exchange, which will be watched over by A. I. Mason, one of the best known apple men of the Pacific Northwest, has allied itself with the Northwestern Fruit exchange of this city and will market its output of Spitzenberg and Yellow Newton apples under the latter's brand.

While the organization of the Hood River Fruit Growers' exchange is as yet composed of few growers because it was started after most of the fruit had been contracted to other parties, the promoters say that many have already signified their intention of shipping under its auspices next season.

The organization gives the Northwestern Fruit exchange of this city its first real foothold in the most famous apple growing section of the world. While it has marketed apples for other organizations there at times when the latter could not find an outlet for their own product, still it has never before been actually presented in the district.

"We mean to pay special attention to Hood River fruit hereafter," says W. F. Gwin, selling authority of the Northwestern Fruit exchange. "We were asked by some of the leading growers of the district to market their fruit this season and have accepted. All of the fruit will be graded by a special machine and will be packed in a central warehouse."

HEN MEAT IS BEST PROFIT

SUCH IS BELIEF OF SPOKANE POULTRMAN.

Several Spokane Children to Experiment With Chicken Eggs and Meat.

Spokane, Aug. 19.—One hundred school children of Spokane are engaged in a four months' contest in an effort to determine for the satisfaction of H. E. Sharp, a poultry expert, whether there is more money raising chickens for meat or for eggs. Mr. Sharp, who believes there is too great a tendency to produce eggs to the neglect of the meat possibilities of the industry, has offered prizes to the children who produce the most weight out of a given flock of chickens during the summer. Each pupil started with one old hen and a setting of eggs. The child who, through his own efforts is able to tip the scale with the heaviest total of chicken meat will win the prize. In setting forth his ideas Mr. Sharp said that a dozen eggs that would cost 36 cents if marketed, could be made to produce meat birds which could be sold in the fall at a profit of 50 cents each, or a total of $5. The high price of meat at this time should be, he said, an added incentive to breed poultry for meat. He urged the children to begin learning about the poultry business now, since sooner or later they will be seized with the desire, and thus find out early whether they like it sufficiently to go on with it, or whether they would be failures as poultry raisers.
