Parisian Afraid of Dark.

Paris, Aug. 28.—Because a young Italian living in the St. Denis quarter was afraid of the dark, the inhabitants had an awful scare the other night. Awakened by the violent ringing of the church bell, they thought the city was afire or that the long-expected war with Germany had begun. Six policemen finally broke into the building and found the Italian at the top. He had fallen asleep during service and frantic at thought of all night in the darkness, had rung the bell to attract attention.
