Howard Elliott, President of
New Haven Railroad.

© 1913, by American Press Association.

Howard Elliott, who recently succeeded C. S. Mellen as president of the New Haven railroad system, was also his successor as president of the Northern Pacific when in 1903 Mr. Mellen became head of the New Haven. It is said in railroad circles that Mr. Elliott has for some time been planning to move east.

The late J. Pierpont Morgan, who made him president of the Northern Pacific, had him in preparation to succeed Mellen when that official retired, and it was on the advice of Mr. Morgan that he refused the presidency of the Missouri Pacific at a salary of $100,000 a year, $25,000 more than he received as president of the Northern Pacific.

A native of New York city, Mr. Elliott was educated in New England. He was graduated from the Lawrence Scientific school as a civil engineer in 1881, being then twenty-one years old. During the summer of 1880 he was a level rodman in the employ of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, and in 1881 he regularly entered its employ as a clerk. He remained in the service of this road or its subsidiaries until 1903 as clerk, cashier, assistant auditor, auditor, general freight and passenger agent, general manager and vice president.

England's Post Laureate.

Among literary men in England the appointment of Dr. Robert Bridges as British poet laureate is said to be decidedly popular. He succeeds the late Alfred Austin.

The new laureate was born in Kent and is in his sixty-ninth year. He was educated at Eton and at Corpus Christi college, Oxford. On graduation he studied medicine at St. Bartholomew's hospital and was appointed assistant physician at the Children's hospital and later physician at the Great Northern hospital, London. Not until his retirement in 1882 did Dr. Bridges devote himself entirely to literature, playwriting and poetry.

Bridges' chief critical work is "John Keats—A Critical Essay," which he published in 1896. He also published a volume on "Milton's Prosody." His own poetry has never had a wide sale, although highly appreciated in select circles.

Robert Bridges must not be confounded with the American poet of the same name who has been associated with Scribner's publishing house for many years and whose work is best known over the nom de plume of Doro.

THREE CHUMS NOW MOTHERS

THREE MOTHERS WERE GIRLHOOD PLAYMATES.

Ladd Canyon School is Running in Splendid Condition.

Ladd Canyon, Ore., Sept. 18.—(Special)—One of the most strange coincidences known to have been called to the attention of residents in this section in years was the talk of Ladd Canyon people last week. Three former Ladd Canyon girls who had grown up and gone to school together and been playmates all their lives, gave birth to children during the same week. Mrs. Alec Furgason of Island City, formerly Miss Katie Mulholland, is the mother of a baby boy; Mrs. Alvin Lowman, who was Miss Minnie Linebarger, is the mother of a boy and Mrs. Charles Dougherty of Enterprise, formerly Miss Lula Peebler, is the mother of a girl. Mrs. Furgason's baby is a little the older being born on Monday, September 8.

Miss Ellen Stevens, who was married in La Grande last Monday, was also a former Ladd Canyon girl.

Roy Peebler returned home from Toppenish, Wash., where he took part in the wild west round up. He also visited the Round-Up at Pendleton, before returning home. He is thinking of returning to Toppenish to spend the winter.

James Mulholland lost a milk cow last week, death being caused by eating damp alfalfa.

Those who attended the Round-Up at Pendleton from here were: Mr. and Mrs. Dick Peebler, Neil McClure, Eugene Banton and William McCauley.

School opened here Monday with a large enrollment and Mr. Hunt from Washington as teacher.

Misses Lulu and Katie Counsell are keeping house in South La Grande in order to attend high school.

Mrs. William Wineburn and two children of La Grande, visited here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Banton.

Ed Jamison, of Nampa, Idaho, is canvassing this neighborhood today with photography work for the United Art Co., established at Portland, Oregon.

Miss Ruth Peebler left yesterday morning for Enterprise to be with sister, Mrs. Charles Dougherty, for some time.
