Generous Boss.

A certain ducky who works a small farm for "lives," occasionally furnishes much amusement to persons who happen to chance in his vicinity by his originality and "gift of gab." The other day an individual engaged him in conversation with the intention of hounding up a good laugh for reference at his club. "How do you make out Joe?" "Fine, boss," replied that person. "fine." "But you don't keep all you raise, do you?" "No, sah," replied the ducky, and he continued: "You see, boss, it's dis a-way. I's gets half of all I raises, and that's all I wants. De boss is a gentleman. I guess I could get a third if I'd ask, and I knows he'd give me a quarter if I wuz hard up."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

high cost of living when we can solve a great problem where you can, by thinking one moment, save 70c on one little purchase. It's this way, and it's the whole truth, and if you save on all you buy at this, lick it's a big item. Just keep reading on, we are not through, the best part is yet to come. What we mean is where you pay $2.00 for a sack of flour, when you can get a sack of guaranteed patent flour for $1.30 per bag; here's your 70c, bank it, this patent is all made in La Grande, no freight to pay from the eastern states. If this flour at $1.30 was shipped to Chicago, it would be $2.00 per sack, as the railroad company would get the other 70c; figure it out. Any grocery in this town has the $1.30 patent all guaranteed. It's La Grande Mill Company's Royal Patent. 10-24 2t.
