STOVE LEAGUE SHOWS ITSELF

SNODGRASS AND MERKLE ARE BEING PANNED.

Managers, Players and League President on Ragged Edges.

New York, Oct. 30.—It's about time for a seventh inning stretch. With the Giants and White Sox well started on their World tour and the spring training season four months away somebody may have to get out for fuel to keep the stove going for the comfort of the winter league. Gunning for members of the honorable order of deposed managers by the winter league officials has been to date. Reports have put Bill Dahlen and Joe Tinker in the order. Much denial has come from Brooklyn. President Lynch, of the national league, shares with Tinker and Dahlen the honor of being mentioned as among those who may lose their jobs before the gates are again opened. The annual meeting of the league officials when this argument will be settled comes in December. Starting out by firing two managers and a league president is a good getaway for the stove league. No doubt Miller Huggins, of St. Louis might have been included in the list of prospective winter victims had not the Rabbit beat them to it. Huggins has signed the warrant sentencing him to appear as manager of the Cardinals again. Among other celebrities to be mentioned as candidates for the receiving end of a firing order are Merkle and Snodgrass, the two Freds of the New York Giants. Visions of Merkle's failure to touch second in the famous game with the Cubs were brought up by the first-sacker's play on Baker in the last game of the World's series which allowed Murphy to score. It could hardly be called a play, either, as Merkle gave an exhibition that led many into an argument as to whether boring into Merkle's head wouldn't reveal plans for a hesitation glide rather than baseball brains. They are still trading Merkle for Keney, of the St. Louis Cardinals, and if the work keeps up the big train may yet get into a Giant uniform. Merkle and Snodgrass are world-touring with the Giants' however.

This calls to mind the fact that the Giants have an alibi, even before the season opens, if they should fall down in the National league race next year. The members of the team travelling with McGraw will not get back to this country until the spring training season is well advanced. They will be playing throughout the winter. The alibi will work both ways, either that the players went stale by their winter work, or were late in getting started owing to missing out on the early spring training. The same alibi may serve for the White Sox and members of other teams in the party.

CLASSIC MUSIC POPULAR.

Chicago, Oct. 30.—Banishment of the "smut music" heard so much today in public music halls and theatres and the popularizing of "high class class but not necessarily high brow" music, is today the greatest ambition of Henry D. Legler, chief librarian of the Chicago Public Library. Librarian Legler declares he "has the right answer." Legler started several years ago, with an idea and $4,000, to make America the equal of Germany as a nation of music lovers, and to create a general appetite for good music equal to the appetite that is general for good reading in this country. He declared today that realization of his ideal still is far off, but that his advance toward the goal of his ambition has been so steady that he believes he will live to see his greatest ideals realized. Already he has been opportunely by public officials of many large and small cities to explain his campaign of musical education of the general public. Here's how Librarian Legler is doing it. When the $4,000 appropriation was turned over to the library Legler induced the board to buy seven copies of each of 100 of the best known opera scores, vocal and instrumental pieces that are classics, "but not written especially for the ears of highbrows," as Legler put it. Through efficient systems of publicity these acquisitions were made known to the general public, who responded in far larger numbers than Legler ever hoped for. The music, heavily bound, is circulated as are the books.

"I am convinced," declared Legler today, "that there are hundreds of thousands of homes in America where classical music would be given royal welcome if the families had the means.

I believe in music for the home not alone for its cultural effect but because its moral effects are good—if the music is good. I believe introduction of good music in American homes will mean banishment of the smut song and smut music forever. We made a start last year as an experiment. It isn't an experiment any longer. We will not appeal merely to highbrows. We will merely insist that the music we circulate is of the best class. It would be a good plan to have a board of censors composed not of soulful, long haired highbrows, but of liberal minded lovers of real music who would let in these fascinating, lively popular airs and songs that do not depend wholly on their noise, smut and raucousness to attract. The music will be both vocal and instrumental."

Library Welcomes Smokers. Columbus, Ind., Oct. 30.—"Smoke if you like" is the wording of a sign hung in the public library here today. A room is provided where men may smoke while they read. The idea of Librarian A. J. Dipboye is to make the library serve as a sort of clubroom for men in order to get them into the habit of enjoying the benefits of the building. He has found that the strict rules against smoking tends to keep many men away from the library.
