are the result of what cannot be stipulated except by quoting both sides of the controversy. Ray Goodnough, the local contractor, was coming down Washington street this morning when a fellow on a bicycle hailed him asking for a certain address on Greenwood street. The pedestrian stopped and thought for a moment without reaching a conclusion; in the mind of the globe trotter was unwilling to give the address—says Pahl. Mr. Goodnough, however, could not recall the direction exactly and while he was deliberating, Goodnough says, the traveler called him a fool and remarked: "If you don't know, why don't you say so, you are taking my time." Goodnough was insulted by the remark and "binged" Mr. Traveler a "sap" on the ear that made German blood spurt. Both told their stories to the chief of police a moment later but nothing was done in the way of legal procedure. Chief McLachlin refused to arrest Goodnough, saying he had known him for years and did not think he would strike anyone without some provocation.

"He called me a fool and was mean about it and I don't intend to be misused by any man much less a stranger."

C. J. ALBERT PAHL, MELBOURNE
GLOBE TROTTER.

Preacher tourist, who has a bloody ear because he angered local citizen.

"Mr. Goodnough told the official. The preacher in turn asserts that, 'I was grossly assaulted, insulted and abused, and I want you to understand I have dined with presidents and governors and mayors and am a respected person. I carry a Christian Endeavor pin.'"

Phal expects to go on west tonight to finish up a world tour with easy stages. He is a Baptist preacher, a sign writer and all-around globe trotter, having traveled over Europe he says, visited the holy land and in fact has been over a vast territory of country—all on a bicycle.

"In Egypt, one time, I had trouble, but this, and that incident, are the only ones that I have had of this kind. My bible is my only weapon."

METHODISTS IN JOY FEAST

JOLLIFICATION WELL ATTENDED LAST NIGHT.

Speeches Tell of General Satisfaction Over New Church Home.

Near completion of the Methodist church was celebrated last evening by the serving of a delicious banquet and the rendition of several speeches by guests and members of the organization, at the basement of the new edifice. The jollification shoulder-rub was a pleasing affair, and was topped off with several post-prandial speeches of interest and consequence. The near approach to dedication day has enthused the membership and the friends, and the dinner last evening was a fitting way to express enjoyment and satisfaction at the conclusion of the principal portion of the momentous project. Some little business matters as regard the raising of the final sum of money necessary to give the unhindered title to all the property and furnishings, were taken up during the evening. Speeches were: "Our Christian Fellowship," Dr. A. G. Lane, pastor of the Presbyterian church. "The duty of Christian Manhood Toward Civic Righteousness," Rev. R. E. Close, pastor of the Baptist church. "Sacrifice and Its Compensation," Frank R. Bridges, La Grande. "Improvements in La Grande Since I Left," Geo. L. Cleaver, Imbler. "My Impressions of La Grande," A. L. Lindbeck. "Our Purpose Tonight," Geo. H. Currey, La Grande.

WISE KITTEN A SUICIDE

EDUCATED KITTY AT HOT LAKE CRUSHED.

Cat That Regularly Met Passenger Trains Is Run Over.

Hot Lake Springs, Ore., Oct. 29.—(Special)—There was a "catastrophe" at Hot Lake Springs the other day, and Ed Hall, the night clerk, is heart broken. One of Ed's pet cats was killed by No. 17. He says it was a case of suicide; for both of Ed's pets—there were two of them—knew as much about railroading as he did. The two felines were born at Hot Lake Springs, and the night clerk's special pets from the very day they opened their eyes. They followed him about as a faithful dog follows his master. As one of Hall's duties is to meet Nos. 5, 6 and 17, as well as the "pony" from Baker, his two charges mastered the time tables, so far as these trains were concerned. No need for Ed to call up La Grande to get the dates on arrivals. The two cats seemed to know just when they would come.

'Twas Saturday morning Ed went out to meet No. 17 and his pets a'following. He played with them till the train pulled in and then hustled to do his work. The whistle blew, the bell rang and the train was gone. Hall looked about but only one cat harkened to his call. The other lay dead on the track.

"Of course, it was suicide," said Ed, "why they knew as much about the train as I did. I shut the little fellow in the office while I was making my morning rounds. I reckon that broke his heart and he then resolved upon a suicide's death. You bet I'll keep my eye on the other one, for they were such good company during the 'wee sma' hours.'"

Funny Show Pleases.
"A Game of Whist," as put on by the Miss Jeannie Russell company at Sherry's theatre last night, was a veritable mirth producer. The title hardly gives one an idea of the real essence of the play, because whist is merely incidental to the screaming mix-up, the painful effort to keep the husband of the house from finding out that a neighbor is in the house and almost dying from sneezing as a result of a cold contracted on his way to the house through a driving rain. The incidents that follow, mistaken identities and the flurry on the part of the woman of the house to explain slips in her conversation all combine to make the whole thing a very humorous affair. The audience's giggling throughout the entire presentation and showed by occasional outbursts of enthusiasm that they were with the players. Miss Russell apparently was suffering from a cold but bore up bravely and acted the part of the nonplussed wife with nerve inciting reality.
