

"THE WOLF" REplete WITH SCENERY OF HIGH GRADE

Scene From One of Many That Appear in "The Wolf", Coming Here Soon.

Eugene Walter's play "The Wolf", which comes to the Arcade Theatre on Friday, November 14, might be called a poem play of pictures. It is very seldom that one sees a play that grips the interest and piques the curiosity with its first line. "The Wolf" does that. The curtain rises upon a beautiful scene, it is Indian summer in the northern woods. Pines and golden foliage mingle their light and shade. A stream winds down the avenues of cottonwoods, in the back ground are the blue foothills. To the right is the log house of MacTavish, with a great tree in front of it. Under the tree sits Ba'tiste, the Canuck, puffing at his pipe. In the porchway is the gaunt form of MacTavish, he, too, is smoking. The two men puff in silence for a moment, while the auditor takes in the perfect coloring perspective and grouping of the scene. Then MacTavish says: "you say she died, mon".

This is one of Eugene Walter's strong points—begins his story with the opening lines. He wastes no time in unnecessary conversation, and he sticks to the point from curtain to curtain.

Another of these pretty picture effects is in act three. Two men are squatting in the foreground, standing, is the tall, lithe graceful figure of Jules Beaubien. Hilda appears at the top of the trail carrying the canoe paddle. She stands there an instant holding the paddle like a spear, framed in the dark pine and golden foliage color; with the sunset redening ominously about her. One almost expects to hear the wild cry of the Valkyrie. A little later come the great and intense scene of the play, which is without doubt one of the most novel and gripping scenes ever staged.

M. D. Reynolds says:—

This is to certify that I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism since 1894. Contracted the disease while working with a snow plow on the railroad. For several years I have been obliged to use crutches a great part of the time. Having used three boxes of the Meritol Rheumatism Powders, I have thrown away the crutches and am now almost fully recovered. It certainly has done wonders for me and I heartily recommend it.

THE Gossard CORSETS

They lace in front—as a result the abdomen is relieved of all pressure. Support is given to the organs and deep breathing is encouraged. They emphasize the long graceful line of the back, which artists agree is the most beautiful line in art.

They gently but surely compel a correct standing position and a graceful carriage. I invite you to investigate these wonderful corsets.

A trial fitting will please you. Prices $3.50 to $8.50.
