

"THE WOLF" HERE TOMORROW WORKING LAW MEETS DELAY

Tomorrow night "The Wolf" will appear at the Arcade theatre. This is a sterling dramatic proposition, and will give La Grande one of the few shows that will come here this winter on account of the lack of a straight out road theatre. Seats are now on sale for "The Wolf," and the crowd promises to pack the establishment.

PORTLAND COMMISSION SUSPENDS IT SIX MONTHS

In Portland, Girls Can Work Until Night O'clock at Present

Further light on the industrial welfare commission's rulings is thrown upon the heretofore vague rulings by an interview in a Portland paper yesterday. It says:

The industrial welfare commission decided this morning to suspend for six months its ruling that women shall not work after 6 o'clock in Portland mercantile establishments. The employment of women until 8 p. m. will be permitted. The commission's action and the reasons therefor were stated as follows by Miss Caroline J. Gleason, secretary of the commission, this morning:

"At a meeting of the industrial welfare commission November 12, 1913, the commission discussed the mercantile ruling, which becomes effective November 23, 1913, and the following action was taken:

"It was decided to suspend in part the ruling prohibiting night work for women in mercantile establishments in Portland. For six months after the mercantile ruling goes into effect any person, firm or corporation owning or conducting a mercantile establishment in the city of Portland will be permitted to employ women until 8 o'clock p. m. This partial suspension of the ruling has been made in response to a request from the Consumers' league and others interested in order that the change may be made gradually and without hardship to employers, employees or the buying public.

"The commission wishes to make it plain that the 8 o'clock p. m. dismissal hour does not apply to women employes in restaurants, confectionaries, hotels, telephone and telegraph establishments, nor has the commission contemplated any such ruling in the past."

This means that merchants may work clerks at night during the holiday season.
