THE Gossard CORSETS
They lace in front—

They lace in front—as a result the abdomen is relieved of all pressure. Support is given to the organs and deep breathing is encouraged. They emphasize the long graceful line of the back, which artists agree is the most beautiful line in art. They gently but surely compel a correct standing position and a graceful carriage. I invite you to investigate these wonderful corsets. A trial fitting will please you. Prices $3.50 to $8.50. A complete line always on hand of the different models and styles.

Apples in Demand When Oregon Organization Is a Qualification

La Grande meat dealers have their first big shipment of turkeys ready for the buyers. The coolers are well filled and the price ranges from 24 to 28 cents a pound. There is every reason to believe that the supply is ample.

Apples in Demand

Portland, Nov. 20.—The demand for Oregon apples abroad is increasing. London, Bremen, Glasgow and Liverpool are all after supplies. One of the greatest sales of the season was confirmed today for foreign shipment by the Northwestern Fruit exchange, but the officials of the exchange would not make public the exact details at this time.

Red and yellow apples are both in demand abroad at this time, sales being shown for both Spitzenbergs and Yellow Newtons at very firm prices.

The strength in the foreign demand for apples is a strong contrast to the stubbornness of the American situation. There is scarcely anything doing in the American trade at this time; the market at most places being stagnant.

Practically no concessions in prices are being made by apple interests at this end, because they don't need to. The foreign situation is good enough at the moment to absorb all of the best offerings, therefore it would be foolhardy for shippers to have their light dimmed by the inactivity of the general American trade.

DID HE GET THE COAL?

Washington Correspondent Tells One on Senator Pittman

Washington, Nov. 19.—One of the youngest, yet most widely experienced men in the United States senate is Key Pittman of Nevada. During the gold rush days in Alaska Pittman was a struggling young lawyer in Nome. He had a tiny office on the main thoroughfare and consequently many of his clients were of the type that usually inhabit a mining camp. Rent was high, provisions were higher and Pittman was taking all cases that came his way. Among other necessities of life well nigh prohibitive, was coal, selling at $40 a sack. An old friend of the Alaska days dropped into the senator's office the other day. Here is one of the tales that came to light:

Pittman had won a score of cases during the winter for clients in whose innocence even he had little confidence. Among the most frequent of clients was "Big Red," a hanger-on at a prominent gambling emporium. One day a man, who is now well known as an author rushed into the tiny office.

"They've got Big Red," he shouted. "What's he charged with?" demanded Pittman. "Stealing ten sacks of coal," was the reply. "That's grand larceny," said Pittman. "Is he guilty?" "Oh, hell," remarked the inquirer. "Can you prove he's not guilty?" amended Pittman. "Sure, we can prove it," decisively. "How many witnesses have you got?" "Well, how many do you want?" "All I can get," said Pittman. "But look here," he added on second thought, "I've been defending you fellows all winter and haven't seen a cent yet; I'm through. You'll have to come through. Kick in with something or I won't take the case."

"Well," said the nonplussed applicant. "We haven't got any money, but we'll give you half the coal." Whether Pittman took the case history sayeth not.
