NORTH POWDER MILL ACTIVE

SASH FACTORY IN THE EAST SPURS IT ON

General Conditions in North Powder of High Order This Fall

North Powder, Nov. 21.—Although the lumber market in a general way is in ill health, C. H. Brown, manager of the Radford Bros. & Co., who operate a planer here and buy lumber from all the small mills, have never ceased operation and continues to buy all that is offered at a good price. The secret of this healthy condition locally is that the Radford Bros. & Co. operate a large sash and door factory at Oshkosh, Wis., and the lumber bought here is cut into shop lengths and planed for the factory. It is one of the big enterprises of North Powder and pays out a large sum of money each year to the timber owners and mill men.

Mercantile business here is improving with marked rapidity. The Forstrom store, which opened for business two weeks ago, is adding a large stock of general merchandise and the ex-representative of Union county, who is in charge, has the strongest words of praise for business conditions here.

The new concrete two-story building being erected by Mr. McGregor for a merchant by the name of Criss is almost completed and will soon be occupied by this man, who comes here from Weiser. It is understood he will run a general store.

Best Cough Medicine for Children.
"Three years ago when I was living in Pittsburg one of my children had a hard cold and coughed dreadfully. Upon the advice of a druggist I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it benefited him at once. I find it the best cough medicine for children because it is pleasant to take. They do not object to taking it," writes Mrs. Lafayette Tack, Homer City, Pa. This remedy contains no opium or other narcotic, and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. Sold by all dealers.

COFFEE
Too bad that so many don't know the keen and wholesome enjoyment of a fine cup of coffee at breakfast! So much good coffee is spoiled in the pot.
Schilling's Best deserves a little care—it makes such a difference.
In aroma-tight cans, everfresh; cleanly granulated; moneyback.

MONEY IN COLOMBIA.

A Dollar of That Country is Worth Just a Cent of Our Currency.
Money in Colombia is a rather unstable institution, and big figures do not always mean much. It may be just as well to mention here that when I paid $30 to ride the seventeen miles from Savanilla to Barranquilla I was not guilty of such reckless extravagance as may at first glance appear; also that when the agent at the latter place charged me $40 for riding back the same way and in the same car he merely suffered from an astonishing lapse of memory, forgetting for the moment that he needed the money.

The fact is that the Colombian dollar, or peso, has depreciated until it is worth just exactly 1 cent in United States currency, and there being no room left for the centavo of old it has vanished utterly from the reckoning of men. There are no silver coins whatever, and after a little bargaining one is apt to accumulate an astonishing number of yellow bills—tens, twenties, fifties and hundreds. Then there steals insidiously over one the peculiar exaltation of the wealthy, and it causes not a single pang to pay $5 for a shine or to toss away $10 for a bottle of glacer pop.—William Hard Lawrence in Harper's Magazine.

CALEB CUSHING'S FEAT.

To Prove a Statement He Read a Dictionary Through Twice.
To illustrate the abilities of General Caleb Cushing, one of New England's famous men, a writer in the New York Sun vouches for the following remarkable feat.

It was in the fifties that the publishers of Webster's Dictionary requested General Cushing to write a friendly notice of the work. General Cushing replied that he had read it and that if they expected complimentary notice of a work that contained 5,000 errors they would be disappointed.

The publishers replied that if he would prove his statement to the satisfaction of the editor, Professor Porter of Harvard, they would believe him. Thereupon he read the dictionary through a second time and mailed a list of 6,000 errors to Professor Porter. This extraordinary achievement, declares the writer, justifies the statement made in 1870 by Wendell Phillips that he considered General Cushing to be the most learned man of the day.

PASTEUR'S PLAYTHINGS.

The Great Scientist a Man of Many Medals and Decorations.
The great Pasteur gracefully accepted all decorations. While he had a passion for discipline, he never had any ironical criticism of the distinctions established by society. He attached a value to the glory that came to himself and discerned that men in the world of politics were his inferiors.

In Rue Dutot, in the salon of the apartment that the great Pasteur occupied, one saw in the place of honor a glass case in which brilliantly scintillating were hundreds of decorations. They came from all the countries of the world. There were lions, leopards, elephants, eagles with one and with two heads, roses, saints, angels, all the fauna, all the flora of the world and of paradise. There were diamonds, rubies, emeralds and gold—enough to furnish a jeweler's shop.
Pasteur often gazed upon this case. His little granddaughter remarked the joy that brightened the countenance of the demigod when he contemplated this prodigious display. And one day, pointing to the case, she said happily, "These are grandpa's playthings."—Cri de Paris.
