The Golden Rule Co.WASHINGTON.

First in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen, he was second to none in the humble and endearing scenes of private life. Pious, just, humane, temperate and sincere, uniform, dignified and commanding, his example was as edifying to all around him as were the effects of that example lasting. To his equals he was condescending, to his inferiors kind and to the objects of his affections exemplarily tender. Correct throughout, vice shuddered in his presence, and virtue always felt the fostering hand. The purity of his private character gave effulgence to his public virtues. His last scene comported with the whole tenor of his life. Although in extreme pain, not a sigh, not a groan, escaped him, and, with undisturbed serenity, he closed his well spent life. Such was the man America has lost. Such was the man for whom our nation mourns.—Henry Lee's Funeral Oration on Washington.

FORGET THEE!

"Forget thee?" If to dream by night and muse on thee by day.
If all the worship, deep and wild, a poet's heart can pay;
If prayers in absence breathed for thee to heaven's protecting power,
If winged thoughts that flit to thee, a thousand in an hour;
If busy fancy blending thee with all my future lot—
If this thou call'st "forgetting" thou indeed shalt be forgot!

Keep, if thou wilt, thy maiden peace, still calm and fancy free,
For God forbid thy gladsome heart should grow less glad for me.
Yet while that heart is still unwon, oh, bid not mine to rove,
But let it nurse its humble faith and uncompaining love.
If these, preserved for patient years, at last avail me not Forget me, then, but ne'er believe that thou canst be forgot!

—John Moultrie.
