Some Timely Hints about "Making Up" a Pretty Woman's Face—New Fashion Hints.

He and she had had a spat,
As lovers often do,
And then she said, "I'm sorry";
And he said, "I am too."

She raised her fair face to him,
All glowing pink and white;
Her scarlet lips so tempting
He kissed with all his might.

Upon his manly shoulder
She coyly laid her head.
And with a happy simper,
"Now we're made up," she said.
Aghast, he viewed the havoc
His burning kisses wrought,
The pink and white was streaky;
"Twas worse than he had thought.
Those vivid lips of scarlet,
Had now become a smear.
Yes, I'm made up," he answered,
"But you're not now, my dear."

New York, Dec. 9.—There are two kinds of women—those who powder and those who don't. It is the wise woman, however, who realizes that a little coat of powder covers a multitude of skins, to her great advantage, and that the bloom of youth added with a rabbit's foot is better than no bloom at all.

Time was when the painted lady was eyed askance but now everybody that is anybody is doing it. A little make-up is a dangerous thing, however, unless it is put on by an artist. Painting the face is just as much of a fine art as painting a canvas.

The first and most important thing is to have pure materials and coloring matter that matches up with the complexion bestowed on you by nature. For instance, your shade of powder may be the most clashing note in the whole of your make-up. One person in a thousand has a skin white enough to employ a flesh color or pure white face powder. A cream tint is preferable for the majority of skins and a deep cream is the thing for the olive toned brunette. The shade of rouge is almost as essential but each individual must use discrimination in matching up the tint of the cheeks.

With your pigments at hand it is next for a good strong light, and then to work. First of all the face should be gone over carefully with a good cold cream. Then the last vestige must be wiped off carefully with a bit of clean cheesecloth or sanitary gauze. Next apply your rouge either in the liquid, dry or grease, to suit your whim.

If your face is fat bring the color in close to your nose and if your countenance is a meagre one spread the color generously toward the ears. On top of this apply the powder smoothly, go over your lips with a thin coat of light red lip rouge, and your picture is complete. For street purposes eye make-up is never a success. No matter how carefully it is applied it never defies detection.

The only permissible touch may be an application of brown mascara to those eyelashes so pale as to look like none at all. For evening, neath the shade of electric lights, you may go to the eyebrow pencil and the lines at the edges of your lids and the bit of dark shadow blended underneath your languorous orbs with more impunity.

As a matter of fact, husbands and prudes notwithstanding, a bit of judicious make-up helps every woman and no matter how elaborate and elegant your attire, if your nose is shiny and your face greasy and red you can never hope to be well groomed or good to look upon. And have you ever noticed how many of our husbands like it on the other woman?

Hems on "Hankies."

For the shiny nose or the powdered one there is a brand new hanky come to hand. It has a wide hem an inch or an inch and a half and a touch of delicate color. Either the hem is a dainty tone of pink, or blue, or the center is tinted and the hem is white.

Some of them have the hem wholly embroidered in tiny flowers or dots; some just the corners, and many of the very smartest show only embroidered initials in one corner in colors if the hem be white and the center tinted or white if the color scheme is vice versa. You can have them done to order with your initials at five cents apiece for a half inch block letter.

New Sweater Stunning.

There are some stunning new sweater coats on the market that almost prove you can make a silk purse out of a sow's ear for truly it is almost as much of a feat to make a thing of beauty out of that most hideous of garments for women—the useful sweater. These new sweaters have indeed accomplished the well-nigh impossible. They are of knit silk either of one vivid tone or two, in a wondrous changeable effect. Your soul fairly yearns for one and your fingers itch for the silky feel of them, but as their prices range from $17 to $25 you can only hope good St. Nick may slip one in your Xmas hosiery, along with a new fur coat, a velvet dinner gown, and a pair of long gold earrings.
