PICTURE A RARE MORAL PLAY

Sherry's theatre has perhaps never shown a stronger picture than the one on the bill for tonight. It is one of those moral plays that makes one stop and think whether the mad course of present day life is not responsible for many of the woes and misery of society. A young lawyer repudiates the girl whom he ruined. She leaves home and enters a brothel. All the gilded and showy ugliness of these surroundings is depicted. The facial expression on the part of this ruined young woman is touching. Her former lover is married to another and has a child. The manager of the brothel, a whisky drinking beast, is arrested for enticing a young woman to the place. He engages Gray, the former lover of the unfortunate woman. She appears on the witness stand, heavily veiled. When this is removed she answers the question of her former lover: "Will you tell the court how you came to lead this life of shame?" When he sees her features he falls in a swoon across the court table, guilty struck. Repentant, she wends her way to a lowly church and there dies in the arms of the kind old priest. It is a play that will make reckless young men think. It is one that will haunt them. It is a powerful sermon. The setting is rich and the acting is perfect. It will be here tonight for the last time. Many handkerchiefs were seen last night and the silence was tense. It is entitled the "Master of the Garden." We can't do the picture justice in words. You have to see it.

Your Silver Teapot.

When the inside of a silver teapot starts to tarnish the following idea is very good to make it look like new: Put a large piece of washing soda into the teapot and fill with boiling water. Then boil it for one hour over a spirit lamp and you will find it will become as bright inside as out, and the soda will not injure the silver in any way.

His Chief Objection.

Turning to the newspaper reporter, who was his passenger, the aviator exclaimed: "It's all off; the propeller is broken, and we are doomed to fall 6,000 feet!" "Great guns!" cried the reporter. "I hope we don't fall into the water. I can't swim a stroke!"—Lippincott's.

Strength in the Arms.

Equality of strength in both arms occurs almost twice as frequently with women as with men, more men than women being stronger in the right arm than in the left.

Agreed.

She—So they returned your manuscript. It is too bad. He—Yes; that's what the editor said about it.—Boston Transcript.

Five Buttons.

Chinese coats have five buttons, signifying the five Confucian virtues—humanity, justice, order, prudence and rectitude.

Criminals of Manila.

"Criminals are practically unknown in Manila," observed an official of that city. "I mean by this that there is no criminal class in the islands, as there is in European countries and in the United States. The yeggman, the professional pickpocket and sneak thief do not exist there. Of course we have to deal with high crimes, and there are a considerable number of murders. Doubtless this is due to the mercurial temperament of the people. The Filipinos are much like the Spaniards. They are easily angered and commit murder in a moment of passion. The spirit of revenge also is pronounced among the Filipinos. I have found that most of the murders committed are traceable to that old motive—the eternal triangle. I don't recall any murders in the Philippines that were committed with guns. The weapon ordinarily used is the knife or bolo."—Washington Post.

Woman's Influence.

It is at the foot of woman we lay the laurels that without her smile would never have been gained. It is her image that strings the lyre of the poet, that animates the voice in the blaze of eloquent faction and guides the brain in the august toils of stately counsel. Whatever may be the lot of man, however unfortunate, however oppressed, if he only love and be loved, he must strike a balance in favor of existence, for love can illumine the dark roof of poverty and lighten the fetters of the slave.—Disraeli.

Ringless Weddings.

A wedding without a ring seems incongruous, but in some parts of Spain no ring is used. After the ceremony the bridegroom moves the flower in his bride's hair from left to right, for in those districts to wear a rose above your right ear is to proclaim yourself a wife.

Soothing the Bride.

"I told Maud that Jack was simply crazy to marry her, and she took offense."

"Why was that?"

"Don't know, unless it was that when I said it they had just been married."—Boston Transcript.

Whips at Weddings.

At Swedish weddings among the middle and lower classes the bridegroom carries a whip. This is an emblem of his authority in the domestic circle.

If people censure you unjustly try to feel as charitable toward them as you would if they praised you too highly.

A Way to Distinguish Twins.

Twin brothers who have been called up for service in a Paris regiment are so alike that it is impossible to distinguish between them. The other day one was confined to barracks, and by changing his cap, with its regimental number, for that of his brother he was able to pass the guard whenever he wished to go out. The colonel has now issued the following order to obviate such tricks: "The soldier bonhomme (even number) will wear his hair as long as the regulations, construed with the utmost leniency, will allow and will shave his beard and mustache. The soldier bonhomme (odd number) will allow his beard and mustache to grow full and will have his hair regularly cut as closely as possible by the regimental barber."—London Mail.

Out it Went.

"Good night, my sweet, farewell, my love; my soul goes out to thee! But time is speeding fast, my love, and I must quickly see! 'Tis but a few short hours, my love, and you must think of me till we meet again tomorrow, bye! My soul goes out to thee!"

Thus spoke a lover to his lass. Deep in her eyes gazed he. Now, one fond kiss, one fond embrace—how sweet it was to see!

Oh, horror! Then her pa appeared. "What means this, sir?" said he. Then, with an angry snarl, he roared, "My sole goes out to thee!"—London Mail.

Logic of Youth.

"Father," exclaimed John vigorous ly, "why don't Quakers take off their hats?"

"Because, my son, it is their belief that to remove their hats is a mark of respect that they think they should pay to no man."

"Well," remarked the boy after a moment's silence, "how do they manage when they have to have their hair cut?"—Youth's Companion.

Overstudy.

Books are pleasant, but if by being overstudious we impair our health and spoil our good humor, two of the best traits we have, let us give it over. I, for my part, am one of those who think that no fruit derived from them can recompense so great a loss.—Montaigne.

Lines on the Forehead.

The lines on the forehead are caused by perpetually raising the eyebrows, and no permanent help can be had until the habit is in some measure conquered. The lines should be massaged across the furrows and with a rotary movement outward toward the temples.

Among the phenomenal baseball pitchers touted for this season is a young man with a wooden leg. This should be a less handicap than a bone head.

A "Father and Son" movement has been started in Cleveland. As we recollect it, the original father and son movement was in the general direction of the woodshed.
