PLAYGROUNDS "TOOLS" MADE

CENTRAL BUILDING STUDENTS TO ROMP.

Victrola Already Purchased—Shoot the Chutes Nearly Done.

A hydra-chuted shoot the chutes is to be in working order at the Central school playgrounds, and with its completion there is going to be sport galore when little folks get out for recess recreation. Principal J. H. Price is superintending the construction of a shoot the chutes which is to be something of a novelty. The "kids" are to have a two stairway approach to the top of the chutes, and four chutes will accommodate as many "kiddlets" at a time. The little fellows are looking forward with a great deal of anticipation to the first chute day.

Victrola Is Purchased.

The chute is being built with proceeds from the fall harvest festival program receipts last fall. A portion of those funds were invested in an elegant victrola which is now a constant musical treat to the daily recreation within the building.

The chute is to be the first permanent addition to the playgrounds facilities.

History of the Saw.

The earliest tool that has been traced in Egyptian history is the saw. It was found first in the form of a notched bronze knife in the third dynasty, or about 5,000 years before the Christian era, and was followed in the fourth and fifth dynasties by larger toothed saws, which were used by carpenters, but there are no dated specimens until the seventh century before the Christian era, when the Assyrians used iron saws. The first knives on record were made out of flint and were, in fact, saws with minute teeth. They probably were used for cutting up animals, as the teeth would break away even on soft wood. Rasps, which are but a form of saw, were first made of sheets of bronze punched and coiled round, but the Assyrians in the seventh century used the straight rasp made of iron similar to the modern type.

The Varying Cost of Education.

A certain Yale graduate, for many years a member of the faculty and always a close observer of the home undergraduate, once (in a moment of exasperation, we take it) let drop a significant remark. The burden of the remark was that a majority of the students attending Yale ought to be taxed some several thousands of dollars a year in return for the privilege of attending college, while the remaining small minority should be paid double that amount for contributing themselves to the undergraduate community. Without doubt this observation like the famous reports of Mark Twain's death, was slightly exaggerated. But it was not without its very considerable medium of truth—Yale Alumni Weekly.

Thumbs of the Apes.

The gorilla and chimpanzee, which belong to the higher order of apes, have many points of resemblance to man, but there is one thing they cannot do—that is, twiddle their thumbs. In the gorilla the thumb is short and does not reach much beyond the bottom of the first joint of the forefinger. It is very much restricted in its movements, and the animal can neither twiddle his thumbs nor turn them round so that the tips describe a circle. There are the same number of bones in the hand of a gorilla as in the hand of a man, but the thumbs of the monkey have no separate flexor or bending muscle. This is why a monkey always keeps the thumb on the same side as the fingers and never bends it round any object that may be grasped. In the gorilla the web between the fingers extends to the second joint, the fingers taper to the tips, and there is a callousity on the knuckles on which the animal rests when walking on all fours.

History In July.

In at least four countries perhaps the most important event in their histories was recorded in July—namely, the establishment of their independence. In our own history we have the memorable Fourth of July, while the patriotic efforts of the liberator Simon Bolivar for the independence of Venezuela were consummated on July 5. Colombia ridding herself of the Spanish yoke on July 20. Then there is France, with her July 14, marking the date when the suffering French people stormed the famed and fearsome Bastille. The Spanish forces at Santiago, Cuba, capitulated on July 16.

Fish and Tobacco.

A peculiar aroma is given to the tobacco raised in the Platana region, Turkey, by the use as a fertilizer of a small fish called hamal.
