EGGS THAT CROAK.

Young Crocodiles Are Heard Before They Are Hatched.

That young unhatched crocodiles utter an audible croaking cry within the eggs in which they are laid is averred by Knowledge, and it adds the cry is so loud and distinct that it can be heard when the eggs are buried under one or two yards of sand.

Dr. W. A. Lamborn tested the fact at Lagos on the West African coast. He heard a croaking noise from below a dry path, and, digging in the path to investigate the cause, he discovered thirteen crocodile's eggs at a depth of about eighteen inches. All the young crocodiles hatched out within half an hour of being dug up.

So far back as 1890 Dr. Voeltzkow noticed that unhatched Madagascar crocodiles uttered a cry from the egg at a depth of two yards and that any shock, as of a heavy tread, near the egg caused the baby crocodiles to produce this sound "with the mouth closed, as we produce hiccup sounds." In this way they inform the female crocodile when she visits the nest that they want her aid, whereupon she scrapes the sand away and they emerge.

Apples With Worms.

May it not be that we get a keener pleasure out of eating an imperfect apple than a perfect one? It is neither the best possible apple, which would be perfect, nor the worst possible apple, which would have a kind of negative perfection; it has a worm at the core. But I wonder whether we do not enjoy it more because we have to eat the more carefully to keep from eating him. Besides, he arouses in our mind all sorts of questionings. Why is he there? What kind of worm is he? How did he get in? How would he have got out if we had not ousted him? And—note this—what sort of apple would it have been if he had taken up his residence elsewhere? The perfect apple could have roused no queries which the defective apple does not. The same subtle influences went to make both—the same elements, the same forces, the same chemical processes. But the defective apple has in addition to all these—the worm.—Robert M. Gay in Atlantic.

She Shuffled, He Cut.

At a country ball a farmer had engaged a pretty coquette for the next dance, but a gallant captain coming along persuaded the young lady to cancel her previous engagement in favor of himself. The farmer, overhearing the conversation, went to a card table and sat down to a game of whist.

A few minutes later the captain stepped up to the young lady to excuse himself, as he had forgotten that he was already engaged to another. Miss Coquette, much chagrined, then made tracks for the whist table, hoping to secure her first partner.

Nodding to the farmer and with her face covered with smiles, she sweetly said: "I think, sir, that it is time to take our places."

The old farmer, in the act of dividing the pack for the next dealer, courtously replied: "No, Miss S. I mean to keep my present place. When ladies shuffle I cut."—Liverpool Mercury.

The Bell Bird.

The most remarkable thing in connection with the bell bird is its powerful voice. It utters a clear metallic note that can be heard at a distance of three miles. Its noise is like that produced by a blacksmith striking his anvil. Sometimes it repeats its notes in quick succession, sometimes at fairly long intervals. There is no mistake about the voice of this bird; it is loud and piercing and would be heard above the din produced by every inmate of the zoo raising its voice at once. Except for a space of naked skin on the throat and around the eyes, which during the breeding season is of green color, this bird is pure white. The contrast between the sexes in the bell birds is extreme, for, while the male is pure white, the female is brownish green. Darwin refers to the bell bird when he points out that "white is a very rare color in terrestrial species of moderate size and inoffensive habits."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Steady Employment.

"It's lucky I should meet you, Smith. There's a little bill you owe Timkins, the tailor. He's commissioned me to collect it."
 "Has he, old man? Well, I'm glad you've got a permanent job at last."—London Tatler.

Impertinent.

"I remember very well the first dollar I ever put in the bank."
 "The first? Then you have put in more than one?"—New Orleans Picayune.

Just a Deduction.

"What is his sphere in life?"
 "Well, judging from the circle of his acquaintances, I'd say he was a rounder."—California Pheasant.

Have you eaten too many big, fine dinners during the holidays? If so, thoroughly cleanse your system before you become sick. It is far easier to arrest disease in its early stages than to permanently get rid of it later. See your doctor now, and then us, before the ill effects have settled down upon you.
