Exoneration.

An old gentleman, always very polite to ladies, was asserting one day that he had never seen a really ugly woman. A lady with a flat nose, overhanging lip, said:

"Sir, look at me and confess that I'm really ugly."

"Madam," he replied, "like the rest of your sex, you are an angel fallen from the skies, but it was your misfortune rather than your fault that you happened to alight on your nose."

—London Tit-Bits.

Long and Short.

The longest hour of all my life I never, never shall forget. It was an hour of painful strife. Remembrance of it grieves me yet. 'Twas not where mighty armies clashed. With shells exploding in the air. Nor where wild billows madly splashed. 'Twas in a heartless dentist's chair.

The shortest hour that I recall Was not an hour I spent alone Beside the fairest girl of all On whom the sun has ever shone; It was the hour when she was late And, while she made herself superb, Allowed the taxicab to wait. At my expense beside the curb. —S. E. Kiser in Chicago Record-Herald.

An Outrageous Insinuation.

An attorney was cross examining a witness.

"You say you left Boston on the 10th?" queried the lawyer.

"Yes, sir," replied the witness.

"And returned on the 28th?"

"Yes, sir."

"What were you doing in the interim?"

"I never was in such a place!" he replied indignantly, with heightened color.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

The Auto In Society.

The motorcar of late has come To be a social sign, And if you wish to have a place Among the superfluous You've got to pay the highest price And drive the finest car Or never, never in your life Be quite a social star. And yet, Dear friends, do not forget, Though you rise with your automobile Or fall, The gasoline smells Just the same in them all. —William J. Lampton in Judge.

Taking Precautions.

"I wish," wished the man who was always wishing for something or other—"I wish I knew the exact spot where I'm gonna die."

"You're crazy," said his friend. "to make a wish like that. Why, man, you'd worry and fret all your life if you knew where you are going to die."

"I would not. Gee whiz! I'd never go near the place."—Boston Post.

Why.

I loved her not because she was A heart-disturbing beauty. No, I did not love my heart to her Because her voice was sweet and low.

If you must know the reason why— To give the answer here I pause— She never piped that stereotyped, That noncommittal "just because." —Will Herbert in Pittsburgh Page.

Now, It's Downright Cruel!

"Mamma," queried little 'Tny Tod dies, "what is 'single blessedness?'"

"'Single blessedness,' my dear," replied Mrs. Toddlers, "is a bouquet a bachelor hands himself when he wants to get married, but can't find a girl foolish enough to accept him."—Dayton Herald.

Self Importance.

The man who gets before the crowd And talks about himself— He is indeed a very proud And independent elf. He loves to pose from day to day Where every one may see And by his manner seems to say, "Good people, look at me!" —Washington Star.

Out of the Beaten Path.

"You have produced a play without a single suggestive line or situation in it!"

"Yes," replied the theatrical manager with pardonable pride. "The public wants novelty nowadays."—London Opinion.

When I Get Rich.

When I get rich, oh, many things I'll do: For all poor folks whose lives are full of care Their days, now drear, I'll make so sweet and fair They'll know no grief, no sorrow, no despair. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Living Up to Expectations.

Starecase—in my coming tour I am going to be supported by my wife.

Critics—That's exactly what her family told her she could expect if she married you.—Baltimore American.

Why She Bought It.

She didn't need the elephant. But 'twas a bargain great. It was a thousand dollars, marked Down to nine ninety-eight. —Cincinnati Enquirer

Wow!

Wife—Yes, in a battle of tongues a woman can always hold her own. Husband—Perhaps she can, but she never does.—Denver News.

IF you have never used Electric Lights, you cannot fully appreciate their superiority; if you have always used them, you are apt to accept them as a matter of course; but if you have used them and then, for some reason, are forced to do without them—THEN you will realize how much their brilliance and convenience meant to you. You needn't do without them in La Grande, however, for our service reaches everywhere, and our rates place Electric Light within the means of all.
