HEAVY RAINS VISIT CANYON

USUAL DECEMBER WEATHER IS PREVALENT THERE.

Personal Mention and News Items of Ladd Canyon and Vicinity. Ladd Canyon, Jan. 21.—(Special.)—Even though it is January we are having an unusual amount of rain, commencing again this morning with the south wind, although that is nothing unusual here in the winter as it blows hard nearly all the time.

Buttercups in January. Some of the school children found a few buttercups several weeks ago, and a few of the farmers are endeavoring to get some plowing done which will lighten the spring work considerable. All these facts are very unusual occurrences for this time of the year.

Mrs. Dick Peebler and brother Jack Walker, of this neighborhood, are enjoying a visit from their brother James Walker whom they had not seen for 27 years, or since they were all quite young. Mr. Walker is from Shoshone, near the center of Wyoming, and contemplates making quite a visit with all of his relatives in this valley and a number of old-time friends in La Grande, before returning to his occupation, that of railroad blacksmith.

John McCauley, Jr., who has been suffering with pneumonia the past five weeks, is slowly improving but is yet unable to leave his bed. He is able to sit up a short while at a time.

Boy Sets New Page in Tragedy.

A boy killed seven persons in a farmhouse near Nantes, France, one night recently. The crime, which is one of the most terrible recorded for years was committed by a boy of fifteen, Marcel Redureau who murdered the seven people, and then went home to bed. Redureau was employed by a farmer named Mabit in the village of Le Landreau. He and the farmer were working in the wine vat at ten o'clock at night, when Mabit made an observation to the boy which he resented. Redureau, who had in his hand one of the short sharp curved knives used to trim the vines, immediately stabbed the farmer in the neck. This is the boy's own description of what happened, as the police took it down from his lips when they had saved him from being lynched by the villagers: "I did not deserve what Mabit said to me. He had his back turned to me, and I stabbed him with the knife. Then I saw red. I went straight into the farmhouse and cut old Madame Mabit's throat. She screamed, her daughter-in-law and the servant came running. I killed them both. Then I went into the children's room and cut the throats of all three (the children were eight, seven and two years). I did not see the other child, and I do not regret what I have done."

"Grip Fast."

Some interest was aroused in the old country by the announcement that H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught, our governor-general, recently paid a visit to Ireland, no doubt to find out for King George the exact position of matters in the Emerald Isle.

During his stay in Ireland the duke was the guest of Colonel John Leslie, veteran baronet who belongs to the house of which the Earl of Rothes is the head. Colonel Leslie, who was formerly in the Grenadier Guards, served in the Egyptian Expedition and in South Africa. He is a prominent man in County Monaghan, which his father formerly represented in the house of commons. There is an interesting legend—not accepted by the family—concerning the motto which Sir John Leslie and the Earl of Rothes have adopted—"Grip Fast." The story runs that as Queen Margaret of Scotland was crossing a swollen river she was thrown from her horse. A Leslie caught hold of her girdle, whereupon the Queen cried out: "Grip fast!" and, to mark her gratitude, desired those words to be retained as her rescuer's motto.
