MONKEY WINS MANY FRIENDS

VAUDEVILLE ACT BY ANIMALS WINS FAVOR.

Much Intelligence Shown By Animals In Sherry's Attractions.

The almost human monkey at Sherry's theatre, and the intelligent cockatoos trained by Mlle. Viola, are a wonderfully strong drawing card. Last night the theatre was packed to the doors from 7 o'clock until closing time and when the birds and mokey were going through their stunts hardly a sound could be heard in the big theatre.

The birds go through several acrobatic stunts, assist in the extinguishing of a fire in a house, see-saw and many other antics that would make one think they could hardly do it without intelligence. One big bird showed a marked degree of humanlike intelligence in calling out any number one may write. The plumage of two of the birds beggars description for beauty. But they are only beautiful and do little in the way of acting.

It is left to the monkey to play the climax stunt in this attractive vaudeville stunt.

He appears on the stage in full dress, hands his hat and cane to an attendant and then takes his seat at table and orders his meal in a manner much like a human being. He has a fondness for liquor and acts intoxicated on going to bed. He undresses himself and goes to bed and covers himself without assistance.

Sherry's theatre was crowded last night and gave evidence of the fact that this vaudeville attraction is really what anybody would call it, one of the best animal bills that has ever been here. The price remains the same, 10-cents.—Ad.
