

RICHET AND CONWAY LOSE

NEW TRIAL IS DENIED BY JUDGE BEAN.

Elgin and Summerville Fraud Cases to "Stick."

Portland, Ore., Feb. 3.—(Special).—United States District Judge Bean yesterday refused to grant a new trial to Frank Richet and J. T. Conway, convicted in his court early in December, of misusing the mails in the exploitation of mountainous lands near Elgin and Summerville and in Central Oregon. The motion for a new hearing was made by Attorneys Fulton and Bowerman for the defendants on the ground that articles published in the Journal during the progress of the case had prejudiced people of the city against the defendants and created an atmosphere that denied the possibility of Conway and Richet receiving a fair hearing. Judge Bean's comment was short. "I must say that the publication of the articles," he declared, "at least, was unfortunate, coming as it did during the pendency of an important criminal trial. The motion for a new trial, however, will be overruled because the record shows that none of the jurors read the articles." On motion of United States Attorney Clarence L. Reames, Judge Bean said he would sentence Conway and Richet next Monday.

BUILD NESTS OF MUD

SOUTH AMERICAN BIRDS CONSTRUCT STRONG STRUCTURES.

As Small as the Robin, the "Casaras" Demand a Luxurious Home and Have the Ability to Put It Together.

Visitors to Argentina or Uruguay are surprised to see big wads of sun baked mud perched upon trees, rocks, the cross arms of telegraph poles, or fence posts, and still more amazed to learn that these curious masses are the nests or birds not unlike our robins. The people call the little architects casaras (housekeepers), or horneros (oven birds), for their buildings resemble the dome shaped ovens of clay that stand in every farmer's dooryard, says the Youth's Companion.

When the autumn rains soften the parched earth, pairs of these forehanded birds gather beakfuls of the sticky adobe soil, and mold it into a roughly globular form. They mix in, very cleverly, a little horsehair, or some fine grass and rootlets, which prevent the walls from cracking as they bake into sundried brick. When they have finished the outside, they build a partition of mud inside, near the rounded entrance. The inner chamber thus formed is accessible only by a small aperture at the top, and in it they prepare a comfortable bed of grass, or sometimes of feathers. The finished affair is as big as a peck measure, and may weigh eight or nine pounds. It does not crumble away for two or three years, but the birds build a new home each season. The mother bird lays five white eggs in the early spring.

The country people like to have the oven birds about their houses, and the birds usually turn the doorway of their nest toward a neighboring house or road. One observer says that a pair lived on the end of the protruding roof beam of a ranchhouse, where all the family enjoyed their lively ways and shrill song. One day one of the birds was caught in a rattap, and when released, it flew with crushed and dangling legs into the inner room of its house, where it soon died. Its mate stayed about, calling incessantly for two or three days, and then disappeared. Soon it returned with a new partner. Together they plastered up the entrance of the old nest with fresh mud, and built a new home upon its roof.

The advantages of the oven like nest, especially when it has two rooms, are many. It completely conceals the brooding mother and young. It shades both parents from the hot sun and the heavy showers, and the outer chamber furnishes a sheltered lodging at midday or during the night for the father of the family. It can be easily defended, too.

The casaras suffer, however, from one bold and persistent enemy—the martins. These big swallows refuse to breed anywhere except in an oven bird's nest. If they cannot find an untenanted one they will oust the first pair of casaras they find from their snug quarters. Strangely enough the poor owners seem unable to prevent the outrage, although they angrily drive away all other birds that come near their castle.

Forgers' Factory in Prison.

Banknotes made in prison forms the recent astounding discovery made at the prison in Peterhead, Aberdeenshire, the largest convict establishment in Scotland. For some time tradesmen in the district have been defrauded by counterfeit Bank of England notes, and the police were puzzled and baffled. Two Scotland yard detectives were despatched to Peterhead, and their investigations show that the counterfeit notes emanated from the prison, where they were made by convicts. The convicts, after making the notes, passed them to workmen, who were building a breakwater in the vicinity, and received in exchange tobacco and other articles. The spurious notes were cleverly made on paper that had been used in wrapping butter supplies for the prison. So far, the police have failed to discover the men who actually circulated the notes. The prison contains 400 convicts at present, including about a score of well known forgers.
