VENOMOUS LEECHES.

A Perilous Experience in the Swampy Jungles of Sumatra.

Dr. Andries Verhagen of Batavia, Java, was directed by the government of the Netherlands to go to the eastern end of Sumatra to study a terrible epidemic of beriberi which had broken out there. The ship in which he sailed was wrecked, and he and a young assistant offered to go into the interior to seek assistance.

For about ten minutes they struggled through a dense and swampy jungle. Suddenly the younger man cried out with pain. Going to his aid, Dr. Verhagen noticed three leeches attached to his arm. They were of a venomous variety that cling to the lower branches of the bushes awaiting their prey and, not content with gorging themselves on blood, inject into the wound a poison that causes acute pain.

While Dr. Verhagen was helping his assistant innumerable leeches attached themselves to his face and neck. To free him from them the young man had to scrape his skin with a sharp stone. Exhausted by loss of blood, the doctor managed to crawl back to the wreck of the ship, where he fainted. He was taken to a hospital the following day, and it was several weeks before he recovered. One of his eyeballs was totally destroyed by the terrible leeches, its socket being left empty.—New York World.

EASILY SATISFIED.

She Didn't Go Visiting Just For What She Got to Eat.

"Now, don't put yourself out on my account," said Aunt Serelda Beau, as she untied her bonnet strings after arriving without previous warning at the home of Aunt Jane Jay.

"You know me well enough, Jane, to know that when I go a-visiting it ain't for what I get to eat. If you just stir up one o' your 'lection cakes, an' make one o' your raisin pies an' a pan o' your cream tartar biscuits, an' fry a chicken, an' have a little cranberry sauce with it, an' mebbe a glass o' your grape or currant jelly an' a little o' your watermelon preserve, an' then make a pot o' coffee an' put on a few doughnuts, I'll git along all right without another thing, unless you'd like to bake some of your Greening apples. They go ruther good with roast chicken.

"I'm thankful I ain't one o' the kind that visits only for what they git to eat. Older I grow, the less I care for what's set before me when I go visiting. How did your pickanill come out you told me you was goin' to make? I deno but I'd like a little mite at dinner to see if the resect worked as well with you as it did with me."—Judge.

A Mutual Pleasure.

Mother—Were you glad to get back to school and see your dear teacher? Little Son—Well, I—I was just about as glad as dear teacher was to get back and see me!

Time Wasted.

Madeline—He's a nice young man to take a girl fishing. I must say! May—Why, what did he do? Madeline—He fished!

It Is Human Nature to Excel, but not

Self-Satisfaction to Excel by Unfair Methods

If you went into a store to buy a foot Rule, you would not require the dealer to measure the Rule to see if it was 12 inches long. Any manufacturer would be very foolish to make foot rules that did not measure 12 standard inches.

The same may be said of our K line of all wool Goods, made by the Salem Woolen Mills (Oregon) when they say they are all wool, the fact that the manufacturer of foot rules would be a chump to make short length rules applies to the Salem Woolen Mills—they are too well and favorably known to be questioned. These woollens are being used very extensively throughout the east by manufacturers of Ladies' Suits, Dresses and Coats and often sold as imported goods.

We carry a large line and nice range of Patterns 56 and 58 inches wide at remarkable low prices of $1.85, $2.00 and $2.25

Elk Suits for Boys' school wear will give more service and all round satisfaction than any you can buy. They are made for boys, not Sissie boys, but real boys and they must give the hard service that real boys give them.
