WEST POINT DISCIPLINE.

Its System of Demerits and the Sunday Morning Services.

The rigor of discipline at West Point does not leave behind many memories of halcyon college days. There are no week end larks, for, constantly under the surveillance of the officers, the cadets are never permitted to leave except under military orders. If they ride to the adjoining town, Highland Falls, they must not dismount or let their feet touch any soil outside the reservation.

How severe the system of regulating the standard of the several cadets may be learned from the fact that some 18,000 acts of each appointee are "marked" during his four years' course. Any one of which must be passed as good or given one or more demerits. "Late at roll call" incurs one demerit; "absence from duty," ten marks; "slight untidiness in dress," one; "inattention at drill or other duty," five, and so on. If in six months out of some 2,000 events a hundred demerits accumulate the unfortunate student is dismissed from the academy.

At half past 10 every Sunday morning the cadets gather in front of the stone barracks, as trimly kept as any Fifth avenue mansion, and form in line, with faultless uniforms, natty white belts and sash, and march up the hill to the chapel service. It is something of a walk, as some of the puffing visitors observed on reaching the summit terrace. Silently and in perfect time and order the cadets change formation and file into the chapel under rows of historical regimental banners, some of which had seen service nearly a century ago. Some of the old stands of colors were threadbare, but the field of blue always remained with its story of a nation's development, bearing constellations of from thirteen to forty-eight stars in their imperishable fields of blue.

The cadet choir marches down the aisle singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and the ringing voices of those 500 cadets once heard can never be forgotten. The finale, the Dresden hymn, as sung by the West Point choir is an event that musicians from all parts of the world come to hear. The services throughout were impressive and conducted with military precision. —National Magazine.

TAMED THE PIANO.

An Unmusical Variation in One of Gottschalk's Concerts.

Gottschalk, the pianist, was noted for his enormous physical strength almost as much as for his brilliance as a pianist. On one occasion he gave a practical illustration of his strength which, while it did not display his disposition in the most amiable light, undoubtedly afforded him much satisfaction.

He was in concert playing on a piano that was built on a new model, one of the peculiarities of which was that the lip of the keyboard cover projected farther over the keys than in most pianos when the instrument was open for playing. Gottschalk, who was accustomed to throw up his hands to a considerable height during the performance of brilliant passages and was unused to this new form of keyboard, constantly hit his knuckles against the projecting lip.

This repeated rapping of his knuckles at last began to have an irritating effect on him, as the audience could plainly see. Suddenly after a particularly hard rap he stopped short in the middle of his selection, wrenched the offending cover out of the instrument by main force and hurled it across the platform with great violence. Then, with a smile of the greatest satisfaction, he resumed himself at the piano and continued his playing. —Chicago Record-Herald.

The Test of Greatness.

There is no man who has ever sacrificed his selfish desire for the sake of some other person who has never felt a pleasure in undergoing some loss or trouble because it pleased somebody else. It is a truth that man is not a detached being, that he has a universal aspect, and when he recognizes this he becomes great. —From "Sadhana—The Realization of Life," by Rabindranath Tagore.

Cards and the Calendar.

Playing cards in their makeup are akin to the calendar. The two colors are red and black, which answer to the equinoxes. The suits are four, answering to the four seasons. The twelve court cards answer to the twelve months; the fifty-two cards answer to the number of weeks in the year; the thirteen cards in each suit represent the number of weeks in a lunar quarter.

Bostonians in Good Standing.

"Yes, I had a brother in Boston once," said a Chicago lady to a Bostonian. "He was in some great musical society there, but I forget his name." "Handel and Haydn society, perhaps," suggested her visitor. "Well, I guess so. Handel and Haydn were Boston men, weren't they?" —Christian Register.
