La Grande paid unusual tribute to churches yesterday, and throughout the city, special music rang out entertainingly. Easter day was balmy and sunny, affording splendid opportunity for parades of Easter bonnets and easter gowns, but devout devotion was not overlooked.

HOW FRENCH PEOPLE CURE STOMACH TROUBLE.

A household remedy of the French peasantry, consisting of pure vegetable oil, and said to possess wonderful merit in the treatment of stomach, liver and intestinal troubles, has been introduced in this country by George H. Mayr, who for twenty years has been one of the leading down town druggists of Chicago and who himself was cured by its use. So quick and effective is its action that a single dose is usually enough to bring pronounced relief in the most stubborn cases, and many people who have tried it declare they never heard of anything to produce such remarkable results in so short a time. It is known as Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy and can now be had at almost any drug store. It is now sold here by Hill's Drug Store.—Adv.

HAD A SURE THING.

Device of a Canny Scot For Trapping Unwary Motorists.

While he was on the other side Dr. Joseph F. McCarthy, a New York specialist, who has just returned from abroad, heard of a new device of the canny Scot for raising the wind.

A friend of his was taking a motor trip through the lowlands, driving his own car. As he neared a small stone cottage standing close to the road he sounded his horn as a precautionary measure. Instantly a flock of chickens tumbled headlong out of the cottage door and spread fluttering across the road. Before the American could check his speed two hens lay quivering in death in the dust, and the survivors had retreated back indoors.

Then magically appeared the owner of the deceased, a severe and whiskered old Scot. He threatened arrest and prosecution for reckless driving. The automobilist protested that he had sounded his horn in warning. The cottager declared he had heard no horn, and his son, who had arrived meantime from behind a hedge, backed up his father. The tourist compromised by paying half a crown apiece for the killed chickens, about twice their value, and having no use for them, he bestowed the carcasses on the old man.

Thus they parted, but as he reached the crest of a hill beyond the American halted his car to enjoy the view, and chancing to look back he beheld a strange but illuminating pantomime.

The son stationed himself behind the hedge on the opposite side of the road from the cottage, holding under his arm a battered automobile horn. The father scattered grain in the middle of the road and withdrew. The son tooted the horn. The chickens rushed out.—Saturday Evening Post.

Luck.

No man prospers in this world by luck unless it be the luck of getting up early, working hard and maintaining honor and integrity.—Beecher.

Over His Head.

Mr. H. was in the habit of stopping at a quiet, conservative Fifth avenue hotel during the frequent absences of his family. On one of these occasions he observed during dinner that the waiter when serving the coffee produced the coffee spoon from his waistcoat pocket.

Mr. H. did not use the spoon. Instead, he sent for the head waiter and told him what he had seen. That individual blandly and gratefully assured him:

"Oh, that's all right, Mr. H. They're all searched before they leave the house, you know." New York Sun.

It seems that Turner went to Paris once at the moment when the world was beginning to notice the productions of Ziem, and the English Venetian, hearing of the French Venetian, decided to call upon him. This he did and so much admired one of the Frenchman's pictures that he wished to purchase it. When Ziem heard, however, that this would be purchaser was the great Turner he insisted upon making the painting a gift. The two artists parted much pleased with each other. Some years later Ziem and a friend were strolling through a gallery of pictures that were about to be sold at auction. "Look, Felix, look," suddenly said the friend, "there is your picture, and it is signed 'Turner'."

"Yes, it is mine," returned Ziem, studying the work closely. But after a minute's examination he looked up and said: "But let it pass as a Turner. It's a poor Ziem."

Ice and Mice.

For horses suffering from inflammation of the lungs an old prescription was a mixture of shot and powder in milk. This has even been applied to human beings. In "Idlehurst" mention is made of sparrow shot, five or six to the dose, to be taken twice a day, as a remedy for "brown kites," which is believed by the English farm laborers to be caused by the "lights" (their term for lungs) rising up the windpipe. The shot is supposed to weight them down in their rightful place. Sussex, England, is the scene of "Idlehurst." It was a Sussex woman who was ordered by the doctor to put some ice in a bag and bind it on the temples of her sick boy. Inquiring after his patient the next day, the physician received the reply, "Oh, Tommy's better, but the mice are dead!"

Practicing Forethought.

Forethought looks beyond the obstacle to ultimate results. It reaches out constructively for a way to get over, through or around that which hinders the realization of its object.

Forethought when exercised develops the imagination. The mind accustomed to thinking ahead soon acquires vision. This leads to freedom in a higher degree. The one who takes no forethought is surprised, cast down, discouraged, when anything goes wrong. Such a one is enslaved, imprisoned, as it were, by a wall of circumstances. The one accustomed to use forethought is far less the slave of circumstance. Such a one learns to look for a way by which to turn the unpleasant experience into profitable results. He uses his imagination to find a way out. He thinks constructively instead of just blindly giving in to fate. He has learned that by forethought and imagination, by creative, constructive thinking, he can find new ways to success when one way is blocked.—Nautilus.

Reporters in the Commons.

Shorthand writers first gained access to the house of commons with some sort of official acquiescence about 1780. In the year 1805 they are to be found occupying the back bench in the strangers' gallery without interference from the house officials, although the latter affected to be ignorant of their presence. In 1836 the house commenced to publish the daily division lists itself and from that time onward the old idea that there was something sacred about the doings of the house which required the prohibition of publicity was exploded. After the great fire of 1834 the reporters were admitted as a matter of course to the temporary building used by the commons and when, on Feb. 3, 1852, the representatives of the people took possession of their new chamber in the palace of Westminster the press was at last officially recognized and the reporters' gallery as it at present exists was an acknowledged fact.

A Luckless Caterpillar.

Nature is a curious force. There is a caterpillar in Australia. It looks for food under leaves and twigs in the usual way. As it searches, a parasite, specially equipped by nature for the purpose, drops on its neck and fastens itself there. In a week or two this little parasite seed begins to germinate, drawing its nourishment from the very lifeblood of the insect. The latter, feeling sick, buries itself about two inches into the ground. Eventually a pale green stalk about twelve inches high, at the summit of which is a most extraordinary flower, somewhat resembling the top of a bulbous when in seed, appears. The poor caterpillar's refuge in the ground is of no avail, for its whole interior has to make room for a vegetable mass of roots. Sucked as dry as a bone, it is actually converted into a stick of wood.—Johannesburg Chronicle.

Bless the Baby.

Bless this little heart, this white soul that has won the kiss of heaven for our earth.

He loves the light of the sun, he loves the sight of his mother's face.

He has not learned to despise the dust and to hanker after gold.

Clasp him to your heart and bless him.

He has come into this land of a hundred crossroads. I know not how he chose you from the crowd, came to your door and grasped your hand to ask his way.

He will follow you, laughing and talking and not a doubt in his heart. Keep his trust, lead him straight and bless him.—From "The Crescent Moon," by Rabindranath Tagore.

Fox Fire.

Fox fire generally appears on a white oak stump which has decayed from within, so that the whole interior glows like a crucible. At times it seems to vibrate and change like the northern lights on a small scale, but it is difficult to be sure of this.—A Farmer's Notebook.

Two of a Kind.

"Oh, George," sighed the lovesick maiden, "I'm sure I'm not worthy to be your wife."

"Well," replied George wearily, "I'm not worthy to be your husband, so we're just about evenly matched."—Philadelphia Press.

Mean.

Burton—Mean man, isn't he? Robinson—Mean? He's capable of going into a barber's shop for a shave and then getting his hair cut just to keep other people waiting.
