THE ELK'S MINSTREL IN UNION

La Grande, header by the Elk's minstrel, will invade Union next Wednesday for the purpose of helping Union make the horse show the biggest success ever. It is not only the show, and that is much in itself, it is principally the spirit which La Grande is going to show in this particular event. There is nothing quite as satisfying as the neighborly spirit among towns of the same country. Cove has its cherry fair, Union has its horse show, and La Grande has the chautauqua and county fair and the spirit that is now felt among Union county towns is indeed worth while. La Grande is going to turn out for this Elk's minstrel, and invade Union just as they did Elgin. The fruits of that Elgin show are just beginning to ripen. Elgin is a good town and her people are for progressive ideas and fair play.

If the minstrels don't sing like Caruso or Tetravini, or carry out like George Cowen, or swing their arms with the same grace that Gaby Deslis does, it is all because they have not spent a fortune for the training. But there is talent among that Elks crowd, and it is unvarnished and natural and for this reason there is fun in it. If M. B. Donhue or Jack Peare or Norman Desilet or Adna Rodgers can't make a show worth the price of admission they would be the first ones to hand the money back.

The point is, make Union's horse show committee happy by giving this show, make Union and La Grande feel closer by such neighborly acts.

Bishop Greer of New York, calls Sing Sing a college of crime, but so many New Yorkers are taking post-graduate courses there that it might be more properly termed a university.

And the Bennett Democrats seem to be getting more numerous every day.

Have you cleaned up the back yard?

JACK LONDON AT ARCADE TONIGHT AND TUESDAY

Two of the trio, Butler and Lyons, who made such a tremendous hit at the Arcade last night.

"I have never heard any team get such a hand as these people did last night," said Mr. Gardiner this morning, and they richly deserved it. Their act is classy and their own scenery which they carry with them is of a brilliant kind. These people are artists, without a doubt. Their violin playing is well worth five times the price of admission. They have been the greatest advertisement for this house I have had in many a day, and the house ought to be packed every night. I advertise them because the public is entitled to a treat of this kind."

Jack London Act Tonight.

Some one has asked: "Does Jack London really appear in the Famous Player Picture which is at the Arcade today and Tuesday?" To this Mr. Gardiner answers: "Yes, the same man who wrote the Sea Wolf, South Sea Tales, Son of the Wolf and John Barleycorn. It is Jack London himself, the man with a wealth of mind, depth and breath of experience, and America's famous author of fiction. These pictures are intensely interesting because the author himself plays the leading role and for this reason can put his whole heart and soul into the play. Everybody has read The Sea Wolf and has formed ideas about the scenery, places and people and has studied the probability and possibilities of the novel.

The picture is in seven reels, and begins promptly at 7 p. m., owing to its length. Other London pictures will
