

DINERS ENJOY FEAST GREATLY

COMMERCIAL CLUB DINNER VOTED SUCCESS.

Three Speakers Tell of Possibilities and Needs of Valley.

By far the largest crowd that has thus far attended the monthly commercial club banquets, sat down to dine and be entertained last evening at the M. E. church basement. Everybody was out of the building five minutes earlier than had been promised them, indicating to what close attention to schedule the affair went. Many agree that the banquet and speeches had the most satisfying color of any yet. The M. E. church Ladies' Aid Society served chicken pie, piping hot, and plenty of it, and while the Haines Orchestra played soothing melodies, the guests visited and hon nobbed and feasted.

John Collier, vice-president of the club, presided. Walter M. Pierce left his plows and drags to be on hand to tell of commercial club possibilities as he saw them. He pointed with encouragement to the fact that geographic location is no great deterrent in the development of a city, as witnesseth many large cities of the world. The need of bringing intensified farming into vogue, the need of factories to care for by and waste products already grown here and the need of cheaper rates were pointed out in Mr. Pierce's eloquent way.

Mrs. Ed Kiddle of Island City was the only lady on the program. That women have been interested in and are willing to aid in betterment of roads, Mrs. Kiddle vehemently asserted. She recited the social, fraternal and commercial needs of good roads between Island and La Grande, or any other towns and in a beautifully worded speech recited the needs of good roads and the possibilities. "Just as long as there is a road that needs attention in this county the women of this county are going to stand by the men who wish to improve them," she said.

Elsworth Ellis sang two solos that met with genuine approval.

Judge J. W. Knowles in his pleasing way talked on the power of united strength, citing Oklahoma as an example of united boosting—towns of 40,000 and 30,000 have sprung up in a few short years—because every man, woman and child boosts Oklahoma. He voiced the belief that one of the latent industries of this county is mineral deposit, hidden under the crust where timber is sawed and stock ranged.

J. R. Oliver who recently accepted a position as engineer for the Palmer Lumber company, returned last night from Portland where he was active as a witness in a damage suit brought by A. C. Barclay for injuries received while working for the O.-W. at Vale. Mr. Oliver was for some time an employe of the O.-W. here and later for the Southern Pacific.

Pays $1000 For Kiss Which Cost Him His Life

Did you ever read a story or see a play during which you completely lost yourself, where you were unconscious of all that surrounded you, living, as it were, with the characters moving before you, experiencing their joys and sufferings? Well, that is what "When God Wills" does, at the Arcade tonight. It is a two reel feature.

Up in the great woods of the north when the snow is on the ground, is where the story finds its locale. And it is a great locale, too, as we have it in this play. Men move before you—in every line there is the rich red blood of life. Contrasted to all this is one man, a sick man whose only chance of life is getting to a specialist in Seattle, Washington. His wife, on the other hand, is a perfect type of womanhood; but she loves him and sacrifices for him—sacrifices even unto death. But there—that is part of this moving, absorbing life story. See it for yourself.

The menace to Carlotta is the title of another big film.

Tony Panoli is a bootblack. He is rendered happy because his old father and Carlotta, his sister, have just arrived from Italy. He is proud of the new country and his new conditions. One of the first things he does after arrival is to introduce his friend Giovanni Bartholdi, who has proven his benefactor on more occasions than one. Carlotta is delighted with her brother's friend and she trusts him.

Giovanni, however, has fallen into bad habits. One night he gambles and loses his money to the Vulture, one of his countrymen. In his extremity, Giovanni is taken into Tony's home and treated like a member of the family.

Later the Vulture makes the proposition to Giovanni that he bring Carlotta to a certain dive and by speculating upon her frail body, make some money for himself and retrieve his lost prosperity. Giovanni resents the evil proposition, but it preys upon him and finally he consents to it.

He takes the unsuspecting Carlotta to the dive. She is rescued by Tony. Tonight is the last night that Arcade patrons can see the popular cowboy trio.—Adv.

IS THE POLICY OF THE UNITED STORE. You don't have to rush to our store for the fear of not getting it at a certain price for its the same today, tomorrow and forever. You buy it at the lowest margin of profit and do not pay for any additional article you do not receive,—we have no lotteries—that's why we sell so much lower than any of our competitors.

Some stores have been yelling they reduced the high cost of living—If they reduced the high cost of living why did they go thru their entire stock and mark it down after the United Store opened their doors in your city—Because we forced them to come down and if they can sell at a lower price now, why couldn't they have done so before we came to town. Because they wanted the long margin of profit—and would yet, if it wasn't for the United Store—The friend of the workingman.
