ENLIVENED THE PLAY.

Sentiment and Impromptu Humor at a Moving Picture Show.

"Where we went last night," said a frequenter of moving picture shows, "there was a scene in one of the films showing a man and a girl, young lovers, kissing. She was a pretty girl and he was a fine, manly, young fellow, and of course everybody was deeply interested in the picture. But at the precise instant that the lovers' lips met some man in the audience exploded with a gigantic sneeze, whereat the whole house blew up with spontaneous hilarious laughter.

"In this picture scene there was a third figure, that of a man who had seen the lovers meeting and who when he saw them kiss turned away from them to smile. He was, to be sure, smiling over the lovers; but as he looked out on the house at this moment with that smile on his face he seemed like a real man smiling in appreciative understanding of what had just happened in the audience. At the sight of his smiling face the audience again blew up. But, of course, the pictures kept on moving all the time, and in half a minute the audience had once more settled down to look on again at the pictures in the usual quiet."—New York Sun.

DOPED AUTOMOBILES.

Acid Sometimes Used to Put Ginger in Second Hand Cars.

"If you are intending to buy a second hand automobile from a stranger or any one but a reputable dealer, keep an eye open to see that the car is not 'doped,'" said H. Clifford Brokaw, principal of the automobile school of the West Side Young Men's Christian association. "Not long ago a friend told me he had a chance to buy a very good car at a low price. He said he knew it was a good car because it could climb the highest hills on high gear. It could almost jump over a house, he said.

"An investigation showed that the car was old, but that previous to the trial trip it had been doped with picric acid. Picric acid, mixed with gasoline, will give a motor a greatly increased power. A wornout motor can be made to do wonderful stunts by the use of proper proportions of picric acid. Chloroform will have the same effect. Picric acid, however, will ruin the cylinders of the best motor. It will give the car much greater power when first used, but I would not care to buy an automobile in which it had been used."—New York Times.

Failures. "Stand up, Julius Caesar. Didn't you have fits?"

"Yes, your honor." "Weren't you bald?" "I was, your honor." "A dyspeptic?" "I was." "Didn't you write your commentaries for political effect?" "I did, your honor." "Thereby proving yourself without character. Below normal weight?" "I was, your honor." "Then step over there with Napoleon, Alexander, Hannibal, Newton, Charlemagne, Kant, Pope, William Pitt and William of Orange." "What's the matter with them, your honor?" "Matter enough. They are all defectives. They've failed to pass our tests."—Life.

Unabashed.

Years ago Isidore de Lara used to sing his own songs at concerts to his own accompaniment. The most popular of them was "The Garden of Sleep." Once—so runs the story—Mr. de Lara was "Garden of Sleeping" at a private house, and he was immensely annoyed by George Moore, who went on insistently talking after the song had begun. Mr. de Lara sang a few bars and then sprang indignantly to his feet.

"Mr. Moore," he said, "I was singing the other day before the Prince of Wales, and he spoke, and I stopped."

"Well, my dear chap," replied Mr. Moore calmly, "he survives."

Mr. de Lara had humor enough to join in the general laugh.—London Answers.

Yes, He Was All Right.

George R. Sims' account of forgetting his own address and having to look it up in the telephone directory was capped by a friend of mine, says a writer in the London Sphere, who told a story of a man trying to tell him from what he had been suffering. "I have been very ill," he said, "with— with— with— and could get no further. And then suddenly it came to him, 'with loss of memory.' But," he added, "I'm all right now."

Nothing Left.

"Have you," asked the judge of a recently convicted man, "anything to offer the court before sentence is passed?"

"No, your honor," replied the prisoner. "My lawyer took my last farthing."—London "Tit Bits."

HOW TRADES ARE MADE

A great many people that own real estate would rather have some other property. Farmers dig a fortune from the soil, then move to the city. The business man retires from a successful commercial life to live in the country. Exchanges of real estate usually result in a material gain to both parties, not only on account of better satisfaction, but also due to the use made of the land. Furthermore advantageous trade can often be made, when a cash buyer could not be easily located.

He Who Sells REAL ESTATE

HOW FRENCH PEOPLE CURE STOMACH TROUBLE.

A household remedy of the French peasantry, consisting of pure vegetable oil, and said to possess wonderful merit in the treatment of stomach, liver and intestinal troubles, has been introduced in this country by George H. Mayr, who for twenty years has been one of the leading down town druggists of Chicago and who himself was cured by its use. So quick and effective is its action that a single dose is usually enough to bring pronounced relief in the most stubborn cases, and many people who have tried it declare they never heard of anything to produce such remarkable results in so short a time. It is known as Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy and can now be had at almost any drug store. It is now sold here by Hill's Drug Store.—Adv.
