CUT YOUR WEEDS.

An ordinance requires grass and weeds to be cut this month. Don't wait to be told. Don't expect the city to do this for nothing. The appearance of your property and safety of adjoining or your own property requires grass and weeds to be cut. A few have not yet cleaned up their garbage. We have a good garbage man now, phone Black 527 or police station.

RECALL NOT TO MOVE EASTWARD

SO THINKS TUFTS COLLEGE PHILOSOPHER.

New England Will Get Reform Ideas from England is Belief.

University of Oregon, Eugene, July 6.—The east is today more radical than the west, according to Dr. A. A. Berle, the distinguished Massachusetts clergyman and professor in Tufts college, who is one of the principal speakers at the University of Oregon summer school this year. Dr. Berle, in fact, refuses to consider Oregon a radical state at all.

"Real radicalism, as I conceive it," he says, "does not consist in mere drastic changes in the form of government, but in changes which vitally determine the future course of civilization. The influence of mere legislation on progress is often wildly exaggerated, and I think it is so exaggerated in Oregon.

"The deep seated radicalism of the east deals more with substance than with form. I think that the changes in legal procedure alone, as just enacted in Massachusetts, with their effect upon the civil right, are more far-reaching and important than any mere governmental changes. As is usually the case, the things of the greatest moment are the things which attract the least attention. The Massachusetts legislature during the past winter has had before it measures affecting industrial and social relations which involve more thorough-going changes in policy and purpose than almost any state in the union. These measures have dealt with child labor, with housing problems, with the nature of the contract, with the jurisdiction of the courts, with compelling the carrier to share all evidence he has collected with the plaintiff in personal injury cases, and with the government of public institutions.

"The east is not going to fall in line or join in this type of what might be called New Zealand radicalism, which is supposed to be sweeping from east to west. It is going to be a totally different kind of radical doctrine that is going to capture the eastern cities. It will come from England rather than from Oregon, and will deal with the substance of human rights rather than with forms of government. The east is closely watching the reforms in England for which Chancellor of the Exchequer David Lloyd-George stands, and future of the eastern states is going to be tremendously affected by the way in which these work out. The eastern coast is in some ways infinitely nearer to Europe than to the Pacific slope. For instance, in Europe it is ever so much easier for me to get my home papers and news from home than it is out here. The stream of travel that way is thicker, and the means of communication easier.

"I do not expect to see the initiative, referendum and recall travel much farther east than they have already. The 'fundamental reformers' of the east do not regard these measures as effective, and doubt their applicability to the highly concentrated civilization of eastern industrial centers.

"In general, there is this difference between the east and west, that I have observed: The west takes a new idea more rapidly, acts upon it more speedily, translates it into law with less reflection, and it is after it is past that the west spends nearly a generation modifying it. In the east the process is exactly reversed. Ideas are subject to long and hostile scrutiny, and encounter every form of objection and possible modification before being translated into action. But when the time for action comes, look out! The progressive ideas of England and Germany are going to be applied with American effectiveness."
