THE GLASS ARTISTS. At last there has been a prosecution and conviction over the crime of breaking glass on the public highway.

May an auto tire has been ruined in and around La Grande through the inward meanness of those whose cowardly spirit prompts them to do shady tricks under the cover of night or of isolation.

There may be some who do not know it is a crime to break glass on the highway. As information, they should take warning and to those who know, but want to be mean in the face of the law the small fine imposed upon the wrong doers can only be taken as an initiative step to what the justice will impose for a second offense.

It happened that the case in question was outside the city limits and justice speedily was dispensed by the justice of peace. But inside the corporate limits of the city there are many brazen transgressions of the law. Bottles are broken often in the business district and the glass strewn across the street so that no machine could get past without injuring its tires.

Thus far no one has been caught in the city but from now on it is very likely there will be a guilty party picked up occasionally. It is to the city's direct interest to stop this offense because, as the law has been promulgated, the owner of any machine who receives damage to tires from broken glass on the street has a case against the city for damage, just the same as the man or woman who falls through a defective sidewalk and receives injuries.

A POOR JOB.

For a stunning disappointment the O. W. R. & N. train robbers are the worst we ever heard of. They could not pose for a successful moving picture, for they would quit just before the climax. The least they could have done after going as far as they did with the robbery would have been to either remained in hiding or made Sheriff Till Taylor's hunch come true by hiking to Montana or Wyoming. Almost a grave crime as train robbing is the proving of error in judgment of the Umatilla sheriff and Detective Ed Wood. These sheep-hearding train robbers are not ethical. They do not do the things usually done by bold, bad criminals hence officers with bars on their shoulders like a barred Plymouth cannot figure out their movements. It is gratifying to know that the train robbers are in jail, but it is disgusting to think of a couple of sheep-herders creating all of this excitement with no ability to pull off a classic finale.

CUT YOUR WEEDS.

An ordinance requires grass and weeds to be cut this month. Don't wait to be told. Don't expect the city to do this for nothing.
