FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE LOSES

V. W. Knowles, the hog cholera expert who spent a couple of weeks in this valley this fall telling the farmers how to prevent an epidemic of the much dreaded hog disease, is now in Pennsylvania where he was sent by the Federal authorities to help fight the foot and mouth disease. Mr. Knowles is recognized as one of the greatest authorities in the United States on animal diseases, and the fact that the government officials pulled him all the way from Oregon to Pennsylvania to help eradicate the cattle disease is in itself a compliment sufficient to make the farmers of Oregon appreciative of the worth of this man who was assigned to the work in this section, and hopeful that he will be returned to Oregon after his work in the East is completed. Writing of the progress of the fight on the foot and mouth disease Prof. Knowles says:
 "I had a telegram directing me to report on the work of eradicating foot and mouth disease and left Corvallis November 29. I found a great plenty of work here as there are not nearly enough B. A. I. men to do the work before us. The disease seems to be pretty well circumscribed and we hope to be able to confine it to the present known areas. There are but few new cases showing up now and the job ahead of us is to clean and disinfect the infected premises. There are about 150 in Lancaster county. I am now supervising two crews of ten men each and it takes a crew about two days, on the average, for a barn and premises. It is probable that we will be here until early spring but if there should be a sudden falling off of new cases I may be back in Oregon in time to see the opening of March in the Willamette Valley. In the mean time I shall be out in the cold and storms of Penna. hardening muscles that have been softening for many years."

This is a greeting to our customers and all other citizens of Union county. To our patrons of the past, we extend the warmest wishes for a happy New Year; to the citizens in general and prospective patrons, the same. For our patronage during the past year, we are deeply grateful and trust that our service, in return, has been such as to meet with your approval. Continuation of your good will and business, is our wish, but at the same time, it is indeed our greater desire that next year may not only see you prosper but that happiness and contentment may be your lot.
