Valuables Disappear

Pendleton, March 17.—While he slept the sleep of the weary to the accompaniment of snoring snores, D. H. Wilson, a local mechanic, was being robbed last night, as he discovered when he awoke to find his trousers missing. The trousers he finally found hanging on the railing of the stairway in the hall but from them had been filched his gold watch and coin purse.
The robbery, reported to the police this morning occurred at the Copeland rooming house, 717 Thompson street where Mr. Wilson rooms. He had gone to the theater during the evening and had not retired until after 11 o'clock. He had left his door unlocked according to habit and heard nothing during the night. His trousers were found on the stairway this morning by another roomer. There was but little money in the purse but the watch was a valuable one. The police this morning took into custody a young stranger who had roomed there during the night but, after questioning him closely, were convinced of his innocence. However, they would like to find his roommate, who has disappeared.

Pendleton, Or., March 17.—(Special.)—Ko-ko-ya-a-lash, the aged Indian woman who brought farming operations on one big reservation ranch to a standstill while the proprietor and all his hired help turned in to hunt for "buried treasure" died Monday in her tepee without revealing the exact location of the "pot of gold."

Several days ago when the old woman realized she was about to die she told R. F. Kirkpatrick that 19 years before she had buried a can of gold near her old tepee. The most diligent search failed to reveal the can and a short time before her death the woman was taken in an automobile to the scene of her former home. She was too ill, however, to be able to point out the exact spot.
